U. S. WATCHES SECURITY PACT PARLEY!

JAZZ GIRL IN DEAD FAINT AT MURDER HEARING

Dorothy Ellingson Collapses At Conclusion of First Session of Trial

By ELLIS H. MARTIN
For International News Service
SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—Dorothy Ellingson, 16-year-old "jazz baby," collapsed in a dead faint today, at the conclusion of the first session of her trial for the murder of her mother.

The girl rose from her seat beside her counsel, took a step or two toward the exit from the courtroom and fell forward on her knees.

Mrs. Kennedy, deputy sheriff, and Bailiff Harry McGovern picked her up and carried her into the jury room.

First aid treatment was given the girl and consciousness quickly returned.

"Dear Me!" she repeated over and over.

With a court attaché on each side she was able to walk from the courtroom.

Taken to Hospital
She was taken to the jail hospital in the same building walking across the "bridge of sighs" with unsteady steps.

Counsel said physicians would examine her during the noon recess and determine whether or not her collapse was serious.

As she fell forward in the courtroom her face went deadly white. When she was picked up her head hung limply back.

But one tentative juror had been passed when the noon recess was called.

Martin Hencken was the first juror to be passed by both defense and state.

During his questioning the nature of the crime was touched upon, mentioning the girl defendant as the slayer of her mother. This reference however, failed to bring out any recollection or show of emotion from Dorothy, who was sitting where she could hear every word.

"If it were shown by the evidence that this girl had killed her mother, would that relationship influence you?" the juror was asked.

The mention of her mother did not cause a flicker of an eyelid on the part of the girl, who listened with her face tucked in her hands, looking vacantly at the table.

That an imposing array of alienists will be called by both defense and the state was indicated when the prospective jurors were questioned as to their acquaintance with at least a dozen well-known alienists and physicians.

Dorothy Ellingson's youth may save her from life imprisonment for the slaying of her mother.

This was the indication from the questioning of the first jurors called when the trial of the 16-year-old matricide opened today before Superior Judge Harold Louderback.

The courtroom was crowded to the walls as the case opened, but police reserves kept the crowd orderly.

"Would the youth of the defendant influence your verdict?" Assistant District Attorney Harmon Skillin asked George A. Metcalfe, the first prospective juror.

"It would," Metcalfe answered emphatically.

Asked if he would disregard the

U. S. COUNSEL HITS TEAPOT OIL LEASE

Harding's Act in Switching Lease Rights Attacked By Attorney

CHEYENNE, Wyo., March 23.—Denouncing the illegality of the Sinclair lease on Teapot Dome granted by former Secretary of the Interior Fall, Senator Atlee Pomerene today opened the government's argument in the equity suit to cancel the contract for the Wyoming naval petroleum reserve.

Senator Pomerene attacked the executive order of President Harding transferring the oil reserves from the navy department to the interior department.

Sinclair Present
He declared Congressional acts were violated in consummating the Sinclair lease; pointed out that the executive order virtually changed overnight the governmental policy of conservation of oil to one of exploitation.

The government's plan of argument was slightly changed this morning when it was announced that Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, also special oil counsel, would divide the opening statement. Harry F. Sinclair was an interested listener.

STATE CHECKS SHEPHERD'S DEFENSE

Suspected Slayer Of Young McClintock Is Foiled At Every Turn

CHICAGO, March 23.—With the defense checkmated at every turn by the state's objections, sustained time and again by the court, the second day's battle to gain William D. Shepherd his freedom on bonds recessed for lunch this afternoon with the testimony of three witnesses completed.

Dr. Charles Faiman, co-defendant with Shepherd on charges of murder in connection with the death of William McClintock, Shepherd's foster son, finished his recitation of his confession, the chief link in the state's case. He told how he had supplied Shepherd with typhoid germs for administration to McClintock and denied the insinuations of the defense that for this he was virtually promised freedom.

John H. Marchand, a former salesman for Faiman's National University of Science, substantiated Faiman's story in part, told of Shepherd's letter of inquiry to the university and of his discussion of bacteriology cases with the defendant.

"Suspicious circumstances" in connection with the relations of Shepherd toward the foster son were told by Alexander Reichman, co-guardian of the boy. The expected move for Shepherd's freedom on the grounds that he is suffering from diabetes and that confinement while he is awaiting trial might prove fatal, was not offered and it was said this afternoon that this will be held in abeyance until after all witnesses have been examined.

Inquest Postponed
CHICAGO, March 23.—The inquest into the death of William Nelson McClintock at which Judge Harry Olson, "counsel for the dead" had declared he would introduce "new and startling evidence" was postponed indefinitely today to leave the field clear for the resumed hearing of William D. Extra benches were installed to accommodate the spectators and additional bailiffs were stationed outside to hold the overflow in check.

Faiman Heard
The hearing today was opened with the recalling of Dr. Charles F. Faiman, whose confession that he supplied Shepherd with typhoid germs to administer to McClintock.

COMMITTEES MAY DECIDE ON ISSUES

Reapportionment Bill, Gas Levy Increase To Get Hearings Tonight

SACRAMENTO, March 23.—Attempts to speed up the legislative grist mill, which thus far has ground exceedingly slow and produced little of importance, will be made in committee meetings tonight when efforts will be put forth to send two of the major issues out of committee for consideration on the floor of the Legislature.

Prospects for definite recommendation tonight on some form of legislative reapportionment, one of the knotty problems before the lawmakers, are apparently bright. At the joint session of the Senate and Assembly reapportionment committees it is expected that a compromise will be reached between the southern bloc and the "cow county" legislators which will assure action on a modified scheme of redistricting.

The amended West-Chamberlain-Sample bill, which would give Los Angeles five additional assemblymen and two extra senators and deprive San Francisco of four members, two in each House, will be pressed for favorable action by its sponsors as the best available compromise plan.

Gasoline Tax
Highway financing, the other big problem up for consideration today, will be fought out before the Senate revenue and taxation committee, which is scheduled to meet at 8 o'clock to determine the fate of the proposed 3-cent gasoline tax.

There is little prospect of a compromise on the road financing question tonight, however, both the gas tax proponents and the backers of a bond issue having announced their determination to force the matter to a vote. Senator Arthur H. Breed, author of the increased gas levy bill, will lead the fight for his measure and said that he has hopes of getting it out of committee.

Mussolini Security Pact To Britain Leaving Out France Worry to Herriot

LONDON, March 23.—Premier Mussolini of Italy has offered Great Britain a security pact which would exclude France, according to a Paris dispatch to the Daily Chronicle. England has rejected the proposal, the dispatch stated, but France is aroused over Mussolini's move.

The foreign office denied the Chronicle story of Mussolini's supposed offer and stated that the security pact negotiations still were in the formal stage and were being conducted through diplomatic channels, with Berlin and Paris. Britain has asked Germany to elucidate further her pact offer.

Secret pact negotiations were gaining momentum today. The French Ambassador M. Flauriau, has returned to Paris to report to Premier Herriot on the situation. Austen Chamberlain, secretary of state for foreign affairs, will report to the House of Commons tomorrow on the progress made thus far.

The German embassy has cleared up some of the points of the German proposal with the announcement of Germany's intention to join the League of Nations. Britain is inclined to consider the German proposal favorably but Poland's objection will have to be met. It is based on Germany's willingness to guarantee her western borders, but reluctance to guarantee her eastern borders, preferring to submit any dispute there to arbitration.

Poland is an ally of France, therefore Premier Herriot finds himself in a dilemma as a result of the German plan.

FOUR NATIONS IN ATTEMPT TO OBTAIN STABILITY

America Desirous Of Seeing Friendly Relations, But Keeps Out

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

For International News Service. WASHINGTON, March 23.

—For a government that is not a party to the negotiations and will not, under any circumstances, become a party to whatever agreement ultimately is reached, the American government is taking an unusual interest in the diplomatic maneuvering over the projected European security pact.

President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg are keeping in close touch with the negotiations going on in London, Paris, Rome and Berlin. Kellogg made a full report to the president on the situation when he returned from London, and since his becoming secretary of state has supplemented his report with the observations of American diplomatic representatives abroad.

The interest of this government is predicated chiefly on two grounds:

1.—The belief that a security pact, under which the principal powers in Europe pledge themselves to "no more war" for at least a generation, will provide the last great step in the direction of European stability and recovery from the World War, and

2.—The belief that such a security pact will eliminate the last objection that any European power, and notably France, may have toward again sitting down at the conference table in Washington to discuss further reduction in armament.

For these reasons, the administration is desirous of seeing an amicable agreement reached between the nations of Europe, although this government officially can take no part in the negotiations nor encourage openly any of the various plans suggested.

It is the view of administration officials, however, that whatever plan ultimately is adopted must include Germany.

A treaty that did include Germany would save too much of an alliance along the pre-war lines, it was said.

Coolidge's Desire
President Coolidge's desire to invite the world to come to Washington and discuss further armament limitation is inextricably bound up in his present negotiations over the security pact, according to the views held here.

So long as France feels that her new borders are unsecured, and so long as she feels, rightly or wrongly, that she may again be subjected to the so-called "German menace," just so long is she expected to balk at any further

REV. CALDERWOOD OFFERS SERMON

Congregational Pastor Tells
'Authority Of Jesus'
In Sunday Talk

"The Authority of Jesus" was the sermon theme yesterday morning of Rev. C. M. Calderwood, pastor of the Congregational church. He said:

"The most of us agree that the final authority over life is not in the church, nor in the Bible, nor in Christian consciousness. The authority over life is Jesus Christ. We will work through the church because it is his. The Bible is good because it leads to him and contains his greatest teachings. Jesus came not only to save men but to save the whole of man. His work was to restore the individual because of his potentiality. He had a passion for truth because truth affects personality. He was always seeking to create new character. The new teaching of Jesus was for the sake of a new humanity. He had a horror for sin because it robs man of his true personality. He recognized the worth of man and never got so far from God as to teach the doctrine of total depravity. He discovered for man the possibilities of his life."

Big Enterprises
"Big enterprises need big men, else both will fail. Holy enterprises need holy men. What have we to carry into the work of life? Unless we are Christian our acts will not be Christian. Politics, industry, business, social life will become Christian when Christian men and women carry Christianity into these activities."

"Jesus is the authority in the realm of relations. Jesus is the definition of the perfect life in perfect relations. Holiness is not an end in itself. There must be righteousness in character which finds expression in human relations. Jesus gave no sanction to monastic holiness, but he lays great emphasis upon righteousness in relation to others. His test of God-like living was in loving and serving others. 'Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these ye did it unto me.'"

Defenders of Faith
"There are people who are 'defenders of faith' but not defenders of the weak. There are some who are lovers of the truth but not lovers of mankind. The rich young ruler had the desire for perfection but not the passion for humanity. He would have liked a first-class experience but was not willing to offer a first-class service."

"Jesus is the authority in the realm of activity. What must one do to be saved? He must do as Jesus did. What did Jesus do and what would he have us do? In this world of sin what is there to be done? What have others done who have made Jesus the master of their activities? Jesus took men in his grasp and transformed them. The final test is, will we by our activities carry out Christ's plan for the world? We cannot read Christ's message and stop where you please. It binds you with a chain and carries you forward. Jesus had empathy on his heart. His disciples must do likewise. 'Whoever he saith unto you do it.'"

Realm of Truth
"Jesus is authority in the realm of truth. He taught the truth and he was the truth. His teachings have been ignored during all of these centuries by a large proportion of those who professed to follow him. People have not allowed Jesus to master their thinking when it involved a change of conduct. The existing order is held by many to be more sacred than the truth of Jesus. The church has been debating the person of Christ but has forgotten his burning words."

"The ancient and worn-out creeds have never mentioned the ethical ideals of Jesus. Those who formulated them were more interested in metaphysical precision than in ethical righteousness. If Jesus' teachings were those of the Son of God why is it that they have not been taken seriously by those who were so interested in doctrinal precision. Christ's teachings are not a rubber stamp on all existing ideas but rather a revelation of new truth and we ought to learn what that new truth is and take it with all of the authority of the Son of Man."

REV. COLE GIVES SEVENTH LECTURE

'War or Organization' Taken
As Sunday Sermon At Central Christian

"War or Civilization—Which?" the seventh sermon in the series on the subject "Ten Plagues of Modern Egypt" was delivered last night by Rev. C. A. Cole, pastor of the Central Christian church. He said:

"The prophesy 'neither shall they learn war any more' has probably never been hoped for with more earnestness than during the years since the close of the great war. For centuries the dilemma between war and civilization has been growing and with great rapidity in late years. The church has endeavored to restrain, to abolish its barbarities, to limit its areas and to bring the truce of God. Religious wars have ceased. Up to 75 years ago arbitration was not thought of between armies or nations, but during the first twenty years of the twentieth century ninety-six arbitration treaties were signed. Yes, many of them were broken, but the idea was abroad and as Victor Hugo said, 'Nothing is so powerful as an idea whose hour is come.'"

War, Unglorious
"Humanity has come to see that we can have war or civilization, but we cannot have both for long. We are coming to see that there is nothing glorious about war any longer. It is not a school for virtue any more. We have talked about the disciplinary value of war, about its being a tonic for the souls of men, we talked during the last war about what refining fires would do for mankind. We now know different; that the world has reached far lower levels of morals; that crimes of violence and sex are unprecedented. Large areas of Europe have been in a chaos so complete that not one in a thousand of us imagines it. There has been a break-down of all the religions of civilized life and a collapse of character unprecedented in the history of Christendom, at least since the days of the Black Plague. If we are wise we'll never go into war again expecting to come out redeemed spirits."

"There is no limit any more to the methods of killing in war; there is no limit to the cost of war. During the World War the money cost eventually amounted to $240,000,000 a day or ten millions an hour. The Revolutionary War eight years in duration cost about $170,000,000 all told. Those were in the good old days when money was hard to come by. The money spent during 1919 by the U. S. government was distributed as follows: For war, recent and previous wars, 67.8 per cent; military establishments, 25 per cent or a total for war of 92.8 per cent of the national budget. We have for primary government functions about 3.2 per cent, for public works, 3 per cent, and for research, education and development, 1 per cent. And this was in America, and after the armistice! What must it be in European countries? Oh, the burdens of the nations! Oh, the patience of men! How long will they endure? They'll not always endure. They will rise up in their fury and blow this so-called civilization to bits!"

War, Unchristian
"In the face of these and other facts, I have come to the point along with thousands of others where I cannot reconcile Christianity and war any more. Many have reached the same point. Our fathers did about slavery. They have come to the parting of the ways. While recognizing the place of compulsion if emergencies arise, only a blind man can favor organized violence. Opposition to the building up of war machines, etc., is not pacifism, but common sense."

War is unchristian. It is anti-Christian. It has never solved problems. It will not save, but will damn, civilization. With U. S. Grant, I stand to declare war an unnecessary evil. Years ago he said, 'Though I have been reared a soldier, and have participated in many battles, there never was a time when, in my opinion, some way could not have been found of preventing the drawing of the sword.' We cannot save the world politically unless it is redeemed spiritually was the inspired prophesy of Woodrow Wilson."

"It is up to the church and to spiritual forces everywhere to outlaw this monster that has stalked the earth since time began. Only by living the teachings of and following the example of the Son of God shall we bring about the time when men shall learn war no more and when peace shall reign."

TRINITY IN UNITY IS PASTOR'S TALK

Rev. Johnson Preaches At Broadway Methodist
On Triple Being

"Trinity In Unity" was the subject of the sermon delivered yesterday by Rev. Maurice M. Johnson, pastor of the Broadway Methodist church, South. He said:

"We of the evangelical churches are not Unitarians but Trinitarians. In this day of liberal and destructive theology we need to reaffirm our position and be able to give a reason for the hope and faith that is within us. There are many pulpits where vital convictions as to the Trinity of the Godhead have disappeared and in their place is a bagdadocia claim of being 'broad' and 'tolerant,' a confession of pious uncertainty as to the virgin birth of our Lord and a significant silence as to the deity of the blessed Holy Spirit. From such pulpits there pours forth great swelling words about 'our common Father' and the 'universal fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.'"

"My dear friends, the word of God plainly teaches us that only those who have personally received Jesus Christ as the Saviour and have consequently been born again, born from above, only those are in the spiritual family of God and have the right to call God 'Father.' To all such, the Lord, our God, who is one God, is a glorious three-in-one and one-in-three. We can draw some helpful inferences and comparisons concerning the Trinity without seeming to attempt a real explanation of this, the most profound and insoluble fact of our Christian faith. There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the word (Christ) and the holy ghost; and these three are one." 1 John 5:7.

Practical Aspects
"The plurality of persons in the Godhead is inferred in the very first verse in the Bible where we have the strange phenomenon of the Hebrew word for 'God,' 'Elohim,' a plural noun with a singular verb, 'bara' (created). In the twenty-sixth verse of this first chapter of Genesis we read, 'And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness.' Here again we have the plurality of the God-head. One sense in which we are made in the image of God is that we are trinity-in-unity. We are body, soul and spirit."

"There are some very tender and practical aspects of the blessed Trinity. How wonderfully sufficient is our triune God. I have a great all-wise and all-powerful Father; I have a big, kind and kindly elder brother; and there is ever with me the one who breathes me into the spiritual world, the Holy Spirit, the nameless one who ever talks to me of my Father and elder brother. What a glorious family is this family of God of which family you and I are little children. Every need and longing of the human heart are perfectly met and altogether satisfied by our great God-Father, Son and Holy Spirit. Let us adore and worship God."

RICH MAN TOPIC BY REV. KRINGEL

Zion Lutheran Pastor Takes Gospel Lesson As Text
Of Sunday Talk

Rev. Henry O. Kringle, pastor of the Zion Lutheran church, preached yesterday morning on "The Rich Young Man," saying: "Christ was preaching to a multitude of people. Among these, according to Matthew 19:16-22, was a person upon whom the evangelist Matthew fastens particular notice. We are informed that he was a young man; and if there is one hopeful period of life, it is youth, when the heart is still tender, the conscience impressionable, and habits not so fixed that to change them is as difficult as to change the Ethiopian's skin or the leopard's spots."

"He was high in social position, rich in worldly possessions, well gifted and though yet young, he was a ruler among the Jews, probably a ruler of the Sanhedrin, the highest and most honorable council of his people. That he was earnest and sincere is manifest from the manner in which he made his approach; he came running and, regarding not the presence of the multitude nor affecting the dignity of high station, fell upon his knees and cried out: 'Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?'"

Jesus' Attitude
"The Saviour Jesus, it is said, beholding him, loved him. The deep interest he showed concerning the most momentous question that can engage a thinking mind, caused Him to be drawn toward him. Answering the question, Christ directed him to the law, saying: 'If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.' The questioner, unwilling that anything should be left indefinite in a matter of such transcending importance desired the Saviour to be more explicit, to point out the specific requirements of the law which were most necessary for him to observe."

"Our Lord on this occasion was dealing with an individual soul. He knew the peculiarities of this young man, that clothed in self-righteousness and professing to worship the living God, his heart was wrapped up in his riches, they had become the idol which he worshipped. The young man went away sorrowful. May we learn a true lesson here. An important thing did that young man lack, and that was knowledge of God's plan of salvation. It is not by the doing of any number of good things that salvation is ours. By grace are ye saved, through faith and that not of ourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast; it is a clear and explicit declaration of the Word of God. Let us all take heed of it."

Young Man Tested
"There is a man tested case need extreme remedies and so, a Lord who with His omniscient eye did not fail to discover the snare into which the young man had fallen, said unto him, 'Go and sell that thou hast,' and thus show whether thy heart is right with regard to the first commandment. 'Thou shalt have no other gods before Me and also with regard to the sum of the second table of the Law; 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' We must not misunderstand these words, we must not construe them to mean that everyone who would enter into eternal life must go and sell his property."

"Our Lord on this occasion was dealing with an individual soul. He knew the peculiarities of this young man, that clothed in self-righteousness and professing to worship the living God, his heart was wrapped up in his riches, they had become the idol which he worshipped. The young man went away sorrowful. May we learn a true lesson here. An important thing did that young man lack, and that was knowledge of God's plan of salvation. It is not by the doing of any number of good things that salvation is ours. By grace are ye saved, through faith and that not of ourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast; it is a clear and explicit declaration of the Word of God. Let us all take heed of it."

LUTHERAN THEME TELLS OF CHRIST

Dr. Funk Tells Of Great Conqueror And His Method Of Work

Speaking on the subject of "Christ Conquering the World" yesterday at the First Lutheran church, 233 South Kenwood street, Dr. H. C. Funk, pastor, said:

"When Napoleon wanted to conquer the world he resorted to the sword. But Napoleon died hated and despised. On the other hand, when Jesus wanted to conquer the world he girded himself, and took a towel. How different from other men! Poor, selfish, mortal men, want a throne, but the divinity of Jesus Christ was shown when he took a towel. 'In our social affairs and in the business relations of men, what do we find? Men with their heads up. But it is Christlike to serve, to look down. Our gracious Lord was King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, yet he condescended to render the most menial service to mankind.'"

Goodness of Christ
"Indeed, the text affords a striking illustration of the goodness and Godness of Christ. 'He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself. After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.'" and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded."

"We sometimes boast about what we are doing for the Lord, and it is well to be engaged in some good work or calling. But even this is not the most important thing. It is not so much what we are doing for Him, important as that may be, but what He does for us. It is this: That He can take a singing beggar, going about from door to door, and out of him make the hero of the Reformation, whose name we are proud to bear. No, if you want to prove the doctrine of the divinity of Christ, or that His spirit is in you, take a towel."

VERDICT AWAITED IN SOCIETY CASE

Suit For $6000 Runs Costs
To $150,000 As Trial
Nears Completion

LONDON, March 23.—A verdict sought or tomorrow was indicated as the Dennistoun case, a suit for $6,000 which has run up its costs on all counts to a total estimated to be $150,000 neared a close.

The usual society crowd filled the court room early today to listen to Sir Ellis Hume Williams attack Colonel Ian Dennistoun in summing up for Mrs. Dorothy Dennistoun, the plaintiff. His argument was to be followed by the judge's remarks to the jury. Dennistoun's defense was characterized by Williams as "disreputable, dishonest and made to frighten Mrs. Dennistoun to keep her out of court."

Lady Carnarvon, sitting at the counsel table, exclaimed: "It's a lie."

The Greatest Frenchman of them all

Paris recently wanted to know how the common people regarded the question, "Who was greatest?" and they took a straw vote and Napoleon didn't win. The man who did was Louis Pasteur.

The French people showed their keen appreciation of the tireless work this great man did in the interest of human health. Napoleon once said that he was told by one of his generals that the campaign would cost them a million men—"What is a million men to me?"

Not so with Louis Pasteur. He worked for the benefit of the health and life of the human race. He is greatest. The same spirit is in our doctors in Glendale. They are constructive, tireless, scientific, efficient and we are proud of them and as a drug-gist we are proud to get so large a number of their prescriptions and strive with each new one that comes to make it just a little better, if possible, and give just a little prompter service. We are yours to serve to the end.

Friends Pay Final Tribute To H. A. Wilson, Prominent In Upbuilding of Glendale

Loyal Citizen, Leader In Civic Activities, Noted For Religious Work

Many long-time residents of Glendale were included in the large company of friends gathered this morning in the parlors of the Jewel City Undertaking Co., 137 North Orange street, to pay impressive memorial tribute to H. A. Wilson, loyal Glendale resident and one of the builders of the city, who died Friday, March 20, 1925, at his home, 125 North Louise street.

Mr. Wilson's death occurred after an illness of nine months. He had always enjoyed splendid health, until nine months ago, when his health broke down. An operation was performed in hopes of relief, but he was unable to regain his strength and his constitution weakened and his death followed.

Devoted to Glendale
Always devoted to Glendale, his home city for the past fifteen years, Mr. Wilson lent hearty cooperation and was actively interested in the spiritual life of the city. Among his hosts of friends he was held in high esteem as a devoted husband and kind and loving father.

Mr. Wilson was a prominent and beloved member of the First Methodist church, and one of the officials active in the construction of the present church home, North Kenwood street and East Wilson avenue. He was active in all departments of the church, especially the brotherhood. His loyalty to the ideals of the church was reflected in his earnest endeavor toward community welfare, helping to uphold for Glendale the motto "A clean city, kept clean."

C. of C. Secretary
Expression for Mr. Wilson's community spirit was found in his service as secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. He served under the presidency of J. N. McGillis and the McGillis-Wilson administration is an outstanding feature of the history of the local Chamber. Energetic and alive to every opportunity that might tend toward the growth of Glendale, Mr. Wilson gave of himself and his time unreservedly. A memorable event of his term as secretary was the great community picnic he arranged at Verdugo park.

In 1912 Mr. Wilson built the Wilson block on East Broadway, just opposite the fire hall. The building at that time was one of the finest buildings in the city, and for several years served as the home of The Glendale Evening News.

Forms Bus Line
Another enterprise into which Mr. Wilson entered wholeheartedly for the best interests of his city, was the establishment of the Pasadena, Glendale, Hollywood and Ocean Park bus line. There was an urgent need for such means of transportation and Mr. Wilson was the man who provided these cities with the line, which today serves thousands of patrons. Prior to his death Mr. Wilson disposed of this holding. In later years he was active in real estate and interested in development of the Atwater tract, just south of Glendale.

Mr. Wilson was a member of Independent Order of Foresters and Modern Woodmen. Mr. Wilson was born 58 years ago in Tipton, Indiana. Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Nettie Wilson; two sons Lloyd W. Wilson of Hanford, Calif., Verne H. Wilson of Glendale; one daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Lusby, wife of Dr. C. R. Lusby of Glendale; three sisters, Mrs. Colton Whitcomb of Riverfalls, Wis., who, with her husband, is in Glendale, Mrs. Frank Nye of Minneapolis, Minn., Mrs. Ida Tait of Yakima, Wash.; and one brother, Joe Wilson, of Hamilton, Mont.

Funeral Service
Dr. Lincoln A. Ferris, present pastor of First Methodist church, assisted by Henry L. Rasmus, sr., former pastor of the church, officiated at the funeral services this morning. During the service Miss Isabelle Isgrig and Dr. R. W. Lusby sang two favorite songs of Mr. Wilson, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "In the Garden." They were accompanied by Mrs. Harriet Randall. Many beautiful Glendale flowers were sent by relatives and friends.

Interment took place in Grand View Memorial park. Pallbearers were close friends of the deceased, W. F. Fowler, T. A. Wright, S. A. Trowbridge, M. P. Harrison, B. F. Geiger and Ed M. Lee.

THREE MASKED AND ARMED MEN ESCAPE

Thugs Make Guard Helpless, Force Open Safe and Flee With Cash; Police Use Fingerprints to Aid In Search

Three masked men stole into the Pendroy Dry Goods Co. at Brand and Harvard late Saturday night, held up the night-watchman at the points of pistols and broke open the vaults in the sub-basement, escaping with approximately $2500 in cash, in what is said to be the most daring robbery in Glendale crime annals.

This morning Earle C. Pendroy, proprietor of the store, issued a statement in which he declared that the loss is fully covered by insurance.

All day yesterday Chief John D. Fraser of the Glendale police department interrogated employees of the store and others who might give clues to the robbers. Today he made a statement in which he freed all employees from suspicion, declaring the "knockover" was unquestionably the work of expert crooks from some other city.

Get Fingerprints
Fingerprints were developed on discarded checks and other papers disturbed by the thieves, after painstaking efforts by Detective Sergeant F. C. Williams of the local police, an expert in this work. The rogues' galleries of leading California cities will be searched and the underworld combed in an effort to follow up these clues, Chief Fraser stated.

The robbery was dramatic and contained the elements of popular fiction. Shortly after 11 o'clock the night watchman, Adolf Gullard, entered the building by the Harvard street door. As he stepped over the sill, two masked men stuck pistols in his face and ordered his hands up.

Fearing personal violence he offered the valuables he had on his person but the men scorned him, declaring he would not be harmed if he obeyed them. They then led him to the elevator and ran to the second floor, where they bound a pair of bloomers over his head and made fast his arms behind his back.

One man then held him while the other ran downstairs and let in a third member of the gang. These two proceeded to the sub-basement, where the money taken in from day to day is kept in a vault. Knocking off the dial, they opened the doors and made off with the bags containing the receipts from Saturday's business, disturbing nothing else.

Gives Alarm
Then they returned for their companion who stood guard over the night watchman, and the three left the building by the Harvard street door. The watchman staggered out through the door leading to the Chamber of Commerce building, the bloomers still over his head, and made his way downstairs to the Glen Inn, where he told his story.

The police were at once notified and Sergeant C. P. Blake headed a squad that rushed to the scene. The trio of crooks had made their getaway, but the police discovered that they had gained entrance by means of a fire escape leading off the alley, and had gone to the roof, where they jammed a window in the beauty parlor.

Find Money Bags
Sunday morning the Los Angeles police found the empty money bags, containing only a few discarded checks, at the south end of San Fernando road, where they had been tossed into the gutter by the escaping thieves.

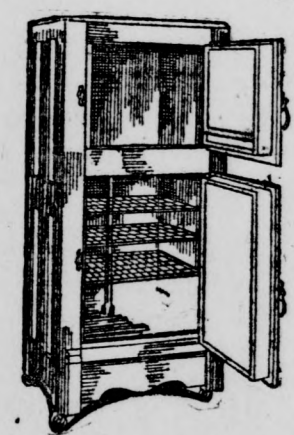

Gullard, the night watchman, declared that two of the men were tall and one short. As it was dark and they wore masks, he could not see their faces clearly. None were foreigners, he said.

THE SOUTHERN BRANCH

The regents of the University of California have decided upon a location for the Southern Branch of the university. While we must believe that the best interests of the southern section of the state and of the present and future students of the Southern Branch should have been the sole consideration in the selection of a site, irrespective of any advantage that might accrue to any city or locality, we must acquiesce in the decision with good grace, for it must be remembered that every site presented had its own peculiar advantages and its ardent votaries, and all could not be pleased.

One of the arguments advanced for the Beverly-Westwood site was that Los Angeles is growing rapidly in that direction. For this very reason we believe the Burbank site would have served a better purpose since there is no advantage—rather the opposite—in having a college located in a congested area within a large city. Indeed, in this regard we believe that any of the sites finally considered would have been much better than the one selected, for all were within easy access of Los Angeles and yet not so situated as likely to be surrounded and swallowed up in the development of the great metropolis of the south.

It is but natural for those who have been working in the interest of other sites to feel that there was undue influence used by Los Angeles interests to have the board choose the Beverly-Westwood site. But, be that as it may, the choice has been made, we have no recourse and we may as well submit gracefully and congratulate the winners.

The cultural atmosphere in the neighborhood of a great university is inspirational and desirable. But, someone suggests that a university town is never anything else. It consists of the university buildings and campus, surrounded by the homes of the faculty and scores of cheap student boarding houses and fraternity houses—and there it stops. Of course we must admit that in this case the group of university buildings will form a tremendous attraction.

Perhaps we should more earnestly desire an educational atmosphere than business progress. We did want the university for this section of the San Fernando valley, but, as long as we cannot have it, we may as well assume this "sour grape" attitude and jump in and work for something else.

A PROHIBITION BIBLE

Just what purpose is intended to be served by the new Prohibition Bible translated by Yale professors and published by Scribner's, it is hard to say. In this "shorter Bible" all references to wine have been eliminated and the word "raisins" has been substituted.

The passage in other versions of the Bible about David dealing out "a cake of bread and a good piece of flesh and a flagon of wine" appears in the shorter Bible as "a roll of bread, a portion of meat and a cake of raisins." The prophet Isaiah's reference to the Children of Israel looking to the gods and "loving flagons of wine" appears in the new Bible as "although they turn to other gods and love to eat raisin cakes at their festivals."

Of course anti-prohibitionists find food for argument in those passages of the Bible which refer to the drinking of wine, but if the word used in the original Hebrew text is equivalent to "wine" they may still point to that. Garbling the Bible will not serve the cause of prohibition. There is just as much excuse for vegetarians to translate the Bible and eliminate all reference to meat. No doubt they would make the passage quoted above to read "A loaf of bread, a handful of nuts and a cake of raisins."

It is probable that those who gave us the King James' version of the Bible made mistakes, but the people cling to this translation and others very much like it, and all efforts to substitute a slang version have been fruitless. The people will not take kindly to this prohibition Bible, either, no matter how strongly they may favor prohibition.

When anyone can take the original text of the Bible, translate it and change the meaning to suit himself, the Bible will have lost its power.

REPUBLICAN WOMEN

The Republican women of Glendale are to be congratulated upon their organization and affiliation with the State Federation of Republican Women's clubs as well as in the selection of their officers, which include as president Mrs. Ella W. Richardson, loyal Glendelian and ardent Republican.

These women have the right idea. We do not need a woman's party or a third party of any kind, but it must be admitted that there is room for improvement and reform in the old parties and the intelligent womanhood of the country organized to study party principles, issues, candidates and impending legislation and to cooperate with the men of the party can accomplish splendid results.

There is a great field for women in politics. Too often there is a dearth of good candidates for many offices. Honest and capable men seem to be taking less interest in holding office than formerly and it may be that the increasing participation of women in politics will solve this problem. At any rate, it will have a salutary effect upon the party for the Republican women to be organized for the study of Republicanism.

WOULD STOP LOANS

Senator Shipstead of Minnesota has some good ideas. His latest suggestion is that the government prohibit further loans to foreign countries that persist in keeping up great military establishments and continue preparations for war.

Such a move would be on the side of common sense. To loan money to nations that are using all their substance and all they can borrow to further war plans is not going to bring about peace.

"Loans are generally being made for the purpose of 'putting on their feet' the borrowing countries," says the Utica Observer-Dispatch, "but how it can do this when it goes for war preparations or to fund some war debt is one of the unexplained mysteries."

If the United States would give plain and positive notice to other countries that no money would be loaned for war purposes, or until those countries disarm and stop their belligerency, the peace of the world would be much nearer.

The conviction that the world is going to the dogs indicates the need of a little sound religion or a dose of soda.

BECOMING A STAR BOARDER FAST

Keeping Things In Their Place

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The lady who had fainted declared that it seemed as though the walls had caved in on her and the floor had come up and hit her. The walls belonged to a certain distance and the floor ought to have kept under her feet. The fact that they were out of place proved that she was deranged.

If you see your grandmother riding on a pink elephant and playing the piano and coming through the door you are pretty sure that you are under a delusion, because grandmothers and pink elephants and pianos do not belong there. They have got out of place.

Sanity consists of keeping things in their place. The young girl who shot her mother recently illustrates this. She had gone jazz mad. Perhaps a little jazz is a good thing and a harmless diversion. But when it gets out of place and causes a girl to murder her mother, something is wrong with the girl.

All amusements are a good thing, in their place. They recreate one occasionally. But when a life is devoted entirely to amusements it is the most bored kind of life. We get sick of it. The people most afflicted with ennui are those whose only business is to amuse themselves. Amusement has its place in life, but on the outskirts and once in a while. It is easy to get too much of it.

We all like to go to fires. They remain the most popular form of amusement there is. But when this desire is magnified one becomes a pyromaniac. He sets fire to buildings just for the pleasure of watching them being consumed.

Eating and drinking are good things in their way. A man must eat and drink to live. But when he gives himself up to the pleasures of the appetite he becomes a glutton or a drunkard. The matter of eating and drinking has simply got out of place. The satisfying of one's bodily appetites should not be prohibited, but regulated, made to occupy the subordinate position which belongs to them.

Love is a good thing and lust is a bad thing, for lust is love out of place.

Harmony is the first law of the universe, as it is said that "order is heaven's first law," and when we have become disordered and things do not remain any more in their proper relations to you it is a bad symptom.

Today's Poem

TOO LATE

Could ye come back to me, Douglas, Douglas,

In the old likeness that I knew,

I would be so faithful, so loving,

Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

Never a scornful word would grieve ye,

I'd smile on ye sweet as the angels do;

Sweet as your smile on me shone ever,

Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

Oh, to call back the days that are not!

My eyes were blinded, your words were few;

Do you know the truth now, up in heaven?

Douglas, Douglas, tender and true?

I never was worthy of you, Douglas;

Not half worthy the like of you.

Now all men besides seem to me like shadows—

I love you, Douglas, tender and true.

Stretch out your hand to me, Douglas, Douglas,

Drop forgiveness from heaven as I lay my heart on your dead heart, Douglas,

Douglas, Douglas, tender and true!

The Best of Advice

By CLARK KINNAIRD

Those of you who know your Dickens probably will recognize this observation:

"To surround everything, however monstrous or ridiculous, with an air of mystery, is to invest it with a secret charm and power of attraction which to the crowd is irresistible."

"False priests, false prophets, false doctors, false patriots, false prodigies of every kind, veiling their proceedings in mystery, have always addressed themselves to an immense advantage to the popular credulity, and have been, perhaps, more indebted to that resource in gaining and keeping for a time the upper hand of truth and commonsense, than to any half dozen items in the whole catalogue of imposture."

"Curiosity is, and has been from the creation of the world, a master-passion."

To awaken it, to gratify it by slight degrees, and yet leave something always in suspense, is to establish the surest hold that can be had, in wrong, on the unthinking portion of mankind."

Here, in a few sentences in "Barnaby Rudge," Dickens has given us the secret of the popularity of so many present day fetishes.

Read Dickens and know humans. His works embrace every phase of humanity. He views life from all angles, with humor, satire, pathos and tragedy.

It was typical of Dickens to write (in the preface to "Oliver Twist"):

"I have yet to learn that a lesson of the purest good may not be drawn from the vilest evil."

"No man's imagination can overstep the reality."

Here is a point our present day Good Gentlemen, in their zeal to purify literature, the movies, everything, would overlook.

Dickens had no respect for moral busybodies. His description of Mr. Pecksniff, as he appears in the pages of "Martin Chuzzlewit," is a familiar portrait of a large section of society in our own times:

"Mr. Pecksniff was a moral man. . . . Perhaps there never was a more moral man than Mr. Pecksniff, especially in his conversation and correspondence. It was once said of him by a homey admirer, that he had a Fortunatus' purse of good sentiments in his inside. In this particular he was like the girl in the fairy-tale, except that, if they were not actual diamonds which fell from his lips, they were the brightest paste, and shone prodigiously."

"He was a most exemplary man—fuller of virtuous precept than a copy-book. Some people likened him to a direction-post, which is always telling the way to a place, and never goes there; but these were his enemies, the shadows cast by his brightness; that was all."

"His very throat was moral. You saw a good deal of it. You looked over a very low fence of white cravat (whereof no man had ever beheld the tie, for he fastened it behind), and there it lay, in a valley between two jutting heights of collar, serene and whiskered as Anthony. It seemed to say, on the part of Mr. Pecksniff, 'There is no deception, ladies and gentlemen; all is peace, a holy calm pervades me.'"

"So did his hair, just grizzled with an iron-gray, which was brushed off his forehead, and stood bolt upright, or slightly drooped in kindred attitude with his eye-lids. So did his person, which was sleek, though free from corpulency. So did his manner, which was soft and oily. In a word, even his plain black suit, and state of widower, and dangling double eye-glass—all tended to the same purpose, and cried aloud, 'Behold the moral Pecksniff!'"

Who's Who

"Serious differences are brewing with England in shipbuilding," says Rear Admiral W. W. Phelps. The pertinent fact which gives Admiral Phelps' widely quoted speech importance is the fact that he is not a retired officer with too much zest for battle, too little to keep him occupied, and too much taste for chatter. Admiral Phelps is an officer on active duty. He is on service in Washington in the department of the navy. He served recently as chief of staff of the naval war college. He is at this moment a member of the general board of the navy, one of whose stated duties it is to consider the navy's building program and another of whose stated duties it is "to draw naval lessons from the world war."

William Woodward Phelps was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1869. He was graduated from the United States naval academy in 1889 and served on the Bancroft during the Spanish-American war. He served in executive capacity on the Mayflower, Kentucky, Constellation and other battleships up to 1916-17, when he commanded the Louisiana. He was assigned to temporary duty with the Atlantic fleet in August, 1917, commanded the transport Great

LEGISLATIVE ACTION IS HELD UP

Gasoline Tax, Budget Bills Remain In Committee To Await Report

By GIL A. COWAN
For Southland News Service
Of The Evening News Staff.

SACRAMENTO, March 23.—At this late date in the Forty-sixth session of the California Legislature a "bloc" of indispensible politicians have tossed a monkey-wrench into the wheels—and the summer's sun may be blazing warmly atop the capitol dome before adjournment.

Senator Jack Inman, Sacramento, is the "bloc" head, it would appear, and he may be promoting home industry by urging the delay of two or three hundred people in the capital city.

To revert to fact, members of the Senate revenue and taxation committee, as well as the finance committee, are said to have subscribed to a round robin not to pass out the Breed bill increasing the gasoline tax, and to hold up the budget bill until the California highway commission, appointed by Governor Richardson, presents a budgetary statement of its plans for the coming biennial.

Economy, Efficiency

There is nothing wrong with their idea, but what does this budget business mean, anyway? The state budget may result in splendid savings being shown on paper, but when in economy admirable, anyway? As the governor says, economy must go hand in hand with efficiency.

In this so-called economy move on the part of the Senate, or it may be worse than that, in that it is a sectional move to force the hand of the highway commission in building more or less unnecessary roads in sparsely settled communities, the writer can find neither intelligence nor efficiency.

First, no appropriation can be passed out of committees on finance in the Senate or ways and means in the Assembly until the governor has signed the budget bill. That is costly delay.

Second, every hour the budget bill is held up means another day added to the present session of the Legislature, with 120 business men, lawyers and farmers kept from home, with two or three local residents.

Third, the continuation of a quarrel over highways is going to breed distrust in the minds of the people and bring about a cessation of new construction.

Already, it is said, the Breed bill, providing for an increased gasoline tax, cannot pass muster in the Senate. If that be so, it should be forgotten, and other methods of financing considered, any business man will agree.

Much good legislation is not getting consideration. It should have, the writer believes, if you will bear with a resume of the situation.

Assemblyman Charles H. Deuel introduced a bill providing for a director of education. For lack of sufficient votes it is hung up in committee. That pleases the politico-educators, who would prefer an autocracy, no doubt.

Mr. Deuel also has a constitutional amendment looking toward an elective board. It should be amended, perhaps, to a degree, and passed out of committee.

Also, Assemblyman Frank C. Weller has a bill strengthening the Blue Sky law to minimize the stock sales fraud. He said he had to return it to committee in order to save it from the slaughter of lawyers who have not been able to do all they desired for clients before the State Corporation commissioner.

Senator Breed is so busy with his highway bills that he may not have the opportunity of strengthening the real estate law. Likewise, there are many other measures needing honest support which will fall unless the people get up on their "hind legs" and let the legislators know they want action.

The burden of the whole session is thrown on a few, it seems, and, while that is ever true, the useless throwing of monkey-wrenches on the part of the oil companies, the educators, the lawyers and last, but not least, the politicians, who are self-seeking, commands such procedure to criticism.

Governor Richardson might well be implored to use a "big stick" on the bad boys.

'TWO COVENANTS' ADVENTIST TALK

Elder Parmele Says Old And New Doctrines Usually Misunderstood

Elder R. W. Parmele spoke last night at the Seventh Day Adventist church on the subject, "The Two Covenants." Elder Parmele said:

"There is no subject pertaining to Bible doctrines which is more generally not understood, and misunderstood, than this subject. Why should the Lord make a covenant that he would afterward conclude a failure, and supersede it with another? And if that old covenant was the Ten Commandments, what constitutes the new covenant? I shall first show in few words what the old covenant is not, what the new covenant is not, then what the old covenant was and lastly what the new covenant is.

"1. The old covenant was not the Ten Commandments, as is clearly shown by the following comparison: Old covenant was made at the exodus, Heb. 8:9; Ten Commandments were binding from creation, Gen. 26:5; established on poor promises, Heb. 6:6; commandments not established on promises; was, therefore, faulty, Heb. 6:7; the law is perfect; Psal. 19:7; just, good and holy, Rom. 7:12; (how could anything be better? Yet the new covenant was better than the old one). Old covenant decaying, waxing old, ready to vanish, Heb. 8:13; 'It is easier for heaven and earth to pass than for one tittle of the law to fail,' Luke 16:17.

New Covenant

"2. The new covenant was not a new law. The word 'covenant' primarily means an agreement, but, even if it were a new law, it could not have in it an obligation to observe the first day of the week, as some Christians affirm, for the following reason: 'Where a testament (or covenant) is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. Whereupon neither the first testament was dedicated without blood,' Heb. 9:16-18. As the blood of the sacrifices sealed the old covenant, so the blood of Christ sealed the new, Matt. 26:28, 'This is my blood of the new testament.' His blood was shed on Friday, 'Though it be but a man's covenant, yet, if it be confirmed (by the death of the maker), no man disannuleth, or addeth thereto,' Gal. 3:15. Therefore, if Sunday observance began at the time that it is claimed by many that it did—late to get into the new covenant."

"3. What, then, was the old covenant? Israel had been slaves in the land of Egypt, had forgotten God and his law, and had been taught to worship the idols of Egypt. But they had also been taught to have great reverence for their promises. This is shown by many Biblical and historical incidents. Moses sought to teach them to keep the law, x. 16:4-30 and 18:15-16; for that purpose God had delivered them, Psal. 105:43-45.

Moses' Work

"Moses had a hard time of it, so God proposed to speak his law in their hearing, that they might 'believe Moses forever,' Ex. 19:9; God spoke the law amid awful grandeur and 'His voice then shook the earth,' Heb. 12:26; then God called Moses and 'the nobles of Israel' into the mount, where God was again revealed to them; they returned and Moses exacted from the people a promise to keep the law, God on His part promised to claim them as His people, Ex. 24.

"Moses then returned into the mountain, and the glory of the Lord overshadowed it, while he remained there forty days, and returned to the people with the written law, but found them returning to their Egyptian idolatry again. That covenant had been sealed by the blood of a sacrifice, and in verse 8 is expressly declared to be made 'concerning all these words,' not that it was the words themselves. So, in short, as expressed in Jer. 11:3-4, it was an agreement entered into between God and his people 'concerning' the Ten Commandments.

People's Promise

"4. The people's promises upon which this agreement was made were poor, but served as an additional reason for repentance when the law was broken. So they would go to the new covenant for help. That is called the 'new covenant' because it was ratified last, by the blood of Christ, but it availed for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament,' Heb. 9:15. 'What is this new covenant? Heb. 9:10-12, 'forgiveness of sins, blessing of knowing the Lord, being His people, and He being our God, and having that 'perfect, holy, just and good' law written in our hearts. All of these promises God has made, so this covenant is established on God's promises. With God's law written in our hearts, we will delight in His will, Psal. 40:7-8, none of our steps will slide, 37:31. We will speak just what the law speaks, Matt. 12:34. (Where it says 'seventh' we will not say 'first'). And it will be natural for us to obey its precepts, Rom. 2:14-15."

Mr. Parmele said the subject for next Sunday night will be "The Relation of the Law to the Gospel."

Three of the world's best-known and most-valued sport trophies prizes fought for each year by daring pilots of racing cars, are on display in Glendale today.

Tuesday and Wednesday, in the window of Pendroy's store, corner of Brand boulevard and Harvard street.

The jewel-crowned, crown won by Joe Boyer in his record breaking ride at Indianapolis May 30 last year, the solid sterling silver trophy won by Jimmy Murphy in the same race; and the famed Wheeler-Schebler cup, considered the most valuable and most coveted sport trophy in the world, are shown in the Pendroy display.

The collection of racing prizes has been brought to Glendale through the efforts of C. M. Fuller, president of the Richfield Oil Co.

Huge Trophy

The mammoth Wheeler-Schebler cup, attracted probably the most attention from crowds who viewed the trophies today. The cup was made by Tiffany and is of sterling silver, standing seven feet eleven inches from the floor and weighing nearly half a ton. The cup is covered with inscriptions showing the prominent part it has played in racing history and the various drivers who have won it.

The solid silver brick, another important racing trophy, is but 5x7x14 inches in size, although it weighs over 150 pounds and is valued at more than $3,000.

ise to keep the law, God on His part promised to claim them as His people, Ex. 24.

"Moses then returned into the mountain, and the glory of the Lord overshadowed it, while he remained there forty days, and returned to the people with the written law, but found them returning to their Egyptian idolatry again. That covenant had been sealed by the blood of a sacrifice, and in verse 8 is expressly declared to be made 'concerning all these words,' not that it was the words themselves. So, in short, as expressed in Jer. 11:3-4, it was an agreement entered into between God and his people 'concerning' the Ten Commandments.

People's Promise

"4. The people's promises upon which this agreement was made were poor, but served as an additional reason for repentance when the law was broken. So they would go to the new covenant for help. That is called the 'new covenant' because it was ratified last, by the blood of Christ, but it availed for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament,' Heb. 9:15. 'What is this new covenant? Heb. 9:10-12, 'forgiveness of sins, blessing of knowing the Lord, being His people, and He being our God, and having that 'perfect, holy, just and good' law written in our hearts. All of these promises God has made, so this covenant is established on God's promises. With God's law written in our hearts, we will delight in His will, Psal. 40:7-8, none of our steps will slide, 37:31. We will speak just what the law speaks, Matt. 12:34. (Where it says 'seventh' we will not say 'first'). And it will be natural for us to obey its precepts, Rom. 2:14-15."

Mr. Parmele said the subject for next Sunday night will be "The Relation of the Law to the Gospel."

TORNADO AREA BOWS HEAD IN PRAYER

Divine Guidance Asked By Thousands In Appeal For Deliverance

BENTON, Ill., March 23.—As though given strength to conquer their mighty handicaps in answer to fervent supplications that flowed from every heart and fell from every lip, storm and fire-ridden southern Illinois bent to the task today of rehabilitation and staving off the odious possibility of pestilence.

Prayers—some silent and some hurled into the Heavens with hysterical fervency—rose from the forlorn masses who gathered in united worship Sunday.

Prayers for the thousands horribly maimed and injured, prayers for relief to the suffering, for strength to the weak and to the strong, that they might carry on—prayers for the orphaned—the homeless, the penniless, and for eternal peace for those who paid the greatest price.

Aching Hearts

It was a day when tens of thousands of aching hearts appealed for divine guidance and the courage to start life anew, while around the worshippers there resounded the steady tread of the funeral corteges and the endless processions of gray and black, bearing to final rest the 588 sacrifices to the madness of nature.

The eternal flame of hope, that, in the ghastly hours following last Wednesday's orgy of the elements seemed forever quenched, became rekindled today. The willingness with which hundreds of homeless turned toward the rebuilding of their shattered world, lent an aura of cheer over a horizon where only devastation was visible.

Further optimism was lent conditions when medical relief directors announced the danger of pestilence had taken on a remote aspect, and that, with restoration of sewage facilities within the next forty-eight hours, this menace would be practically at a minimum.

Relief Agencies

Relief agencies are thoroughly organized. Attention was directed today by relief workers to the establishment of permanent organizations to supplant the emergency personnel in the fields. Representatives from five counties gathered at West Frankfort and perfected such an organization, there, while similar methods were being followed in other towns.

Among the first reconstruction tasks will be the repairing of schools. Children will not be allowed to work and resumption of study is expected within the next ten days.

Perhaps the most exhausted men in the entire afflicted region today were the undertakers and their assistants. Many have worked continuously, day and night.

Under a strenuous program outlined by the Chamber of Commerce it is hoped to have living quarters and employment centers sufficiently rebuilt and under way within six months, to dispense with relief agencies.

COMMENT BY GIL A. COWAN

Now that the board of regents has selected Beverly Hills for the site of future building of a southern branch, University of California, who is satisfied other than the real estate promoters of that immediate vicinity?

Certainly Los Angeles is not, otherwise it would not threaten a referendum. Burbank, Pasadena, Fullerton, Palos Verdes and others are not, for their "noses are broken" as the saying goes.

But Burbank can rest assured that it got loyal support from its sister cities, particularly Glendale, and the publicity obtained in the effort will more than repay each community for its trouble.

And if we can but think of the future there will be other universities and institutions to be obtained at a later date.

Prison reform is a topic in which many people are interested, although it is a subject to be dealt in neither by sob sisters nor professional reformers. It has to be brought about by practical experience.

The visits of Assemblyman and Mrs. Frank C. Weller, Glendale, to both San Quentin and Folsom, so ably reported by the latter, caused the writer at Sacramento to discuss the prisons with Senator Joseph Pedrotti, who was sponsor for the measure permitting convict road camps.

The Los Angeles solon is "sold" on the idea of permitting the prisoners to earn money and cut their sentences by hard work in the great outdoors. Governor Richardson and everyone else who has investigated this phase of criminal reform believe in it.

California could effect a saving of more than a million dollars annually by employing on the highways all its convicts, other than life termers and those unfitted for any semblance of freedom.

The sympathy of Glendale, as well as that of every other community, goes forth to the tornado tragedy victims of Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Missouri. The graphic pictures of the frightful destruction, as presented in last Friday's edition of The Glendale Evening News, make one realize the heart-breaking situation which faces "Little Egypt" as the southern section of Illinois is known.

Money can never replace the 600 and more lives. Time will never heal the wounds of the thousands of injured, and spoken words of sympathy will not replace the happy homes, the stores, the industries and a faith in kindly Providence, not at least in this generation.

Speaking of highways brings to mind the fight over an increased gasoline tax. It was brought out that Oregon increased the tax to three cents without opposition of the oil companies because in that state they are laying asphalt paving which are laid by the University returns money to most interested of the oil companies.

In California cement is being used. The California Highway commission is made subject to all sorts of criticism, and always has been; so are city officials who dare to oppose the high pressure salesmen and their methods of the "black paving" interest.

Regardless of the merits of the increased gas tax, the people should know that there are other things entering into the controversy than "economics."

Glendale and Los Angeles people whoirk under the rates imposed upon them for street car and telephone service by the state railroad commission will be glad to know that a day of reckoning is not far distant.

A woman from Butte county—backed by the farmers of her district—is after the scalps of those commissioners whom she believes have "forgotten the home folks."

The railroad commission needs a roasting. It isn't corrupt and may need facts with which to properly estimate. And it may have suffered from too many legal lights and editorial members appointed for political purposes.

But there doesn't seem to be any question in the minds of most of the people as to its indifference or ignorance at various times in the past.

To make the body elective, as suggested by Assemblyman Charles Deuel, Chico publisher, would not likely be a cure. But the writer believes that the governor's appointees should be subject to confirmation of the legislature, to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that they will be fair and just.

The railroad commission controls rates of more than 2000 public utilities. It has absolute power over larger questions than any of our courts; and this power without the right of review.

The commission should be enlarged to a body of twelve members, of which three seniors to sit as a board of review; three more to handle water and power; three to listen to railroad problems; and three to cover the field in telephone and miscellaneous disputes, the writer believes.

And in their appointments the cities, the agricultural districts, labor and capital should be represented equally, if justice is to be preserved.

Reports are current at the capital that an effort will be made to divide Los Angeles county with Long Beach as a new county seat. That is not a new idea, and perhaps practical. The tremendous increase in population in the metropolitan area has upset all of the original ideas of the fitness of things.

The city of Los Angeles, itself, might find it wise to adopt a bor-

General Satisfaction Expressed By College

LOS ANGELES, March 23.—General satisfaction was expressed today by the faculty and the student body of the Southern Branch of the University of California at the choice of the Beverly Hills-Westwood site for the College of Letters and Sciences, which selection by the University Board of Regents was announced Saturday.

Dr. Ernest C. Moore, director of the Southern Branch, today was without definite information how many buildings will be erected on the new site or how soon the work will start.

Leslie B. Tarr Back From State Capital

Leslie B. Tarr, deputy city attorney, returned from Sacramento Sunday morning, after spending three days at the state capital in the interests of Senate bill No. 476, which has been amended to cover the situation in Verdugo Woodlands, where $50,000 of municipal gas bonds were sold for an improvement that was subsequently put in by the Southern California Gas Co. The bill has passed the senate and Mr. Tarr saw it referred out of the Assembly committee on municipal corporations with a recommendation for passage. It is believed the Assembly will pass the bill and it will be signed by the governor at the present session.

COMMUNITY LOYALTY—COMMUNITY SERVICE—COMMUNITY LOYALTY—COMMUNITY SERVICE—COMMUNITY LOYALTY—COMMUNITY SERVICE—COMMUNITY LOYALTY—COMMUNITY SERVICE

City's financial condition has an effect upon every citizen.

When there is plenty of money in circulation we all prosper.

COMMUNITY CO-OPERATION

Realizing the Great Community Development Truth that a City Grows exactly as its Business and Merchandising Institutions Grow, these firms have given their hearty endorsement to the movement for co-operation between Glendale merchants and Glendale consumers

Good Times In The Community

A community's prosperity is gauged by the amount of money in circulation in the community. When the hardware man prospers he spends his money with the furniture man, the shoe man, the dry goods man, the dentist and the realtor. The same thing applies to every form of business in the community.

The money that is spent in Glendale and continues in circulation here constitutes our prosperity or our lack of it. What we spend outside helps to impoverish us and build up another city.

It is not only the merchants who are concerned in this campaign for community loyalty, although they may be the first to feel the results of it. The wage earner is affected, for the business man must have trade if he is to pay his employees. The churches, schools and all the organizations and movements that are for the good of the community must suffer, too, for the merchant cannot contribute to these things unless he has the patronage of the people. The retired citizen and property owner is affected by the business activity of the city, for the more money in circulation the more improvements are possible and the greater the value of real estate.

The matter of patronizing the home merchants has been likened to a great revolving wheel. Every dollar you spend in Glendale comes back to you again at some time or other, in some form. You may not recognize it when it reaches you, but it comes just the same, either actually or in increased wealth in the community which makes "community good times."

Friday, April 3, has been announced by the Brotherhood of the Community church, as the date for the debate on incorporation, which they are sponsoring. The debate will be given in the auditorium of the church. Speakers will be appointed to represent each side of the question, in order that voters may be fully informed on the subject before casting their ballots.

The Tujunga Rifle and Gun club have sufficient members for charter, which they will receive, together with arms and ammunition within a short time.

The Ladies' Guild of the Episcopal church is preparing its usual Lenten mission box. This year the box will be sent to St. Stephens' Mission, Port Yukon, Alaska. Contributions are solicited, which may be sent to: Miss Townsend, Water Office; Mrs. Dean at her store on Sunset boulevard, or Mrs. Shaner, corner Michigan avenue and Hillhaven road.

Tujunga will soon boast another shoe store, which will be opened by Mr. N. C. Smith, Saturday, March 28th, with Mr. Oscar Hunt in charge. The store will be located on Michigan avenue, east of MacLean's drug store.

The Woman's club will give a Mother and Daughters' banquet on May first.

AT LA CRESCENTA

Mrs. G. Holloway who was the auxiliary's representative at the County Council gave an interesting account of the last meeting held in Los Angeles. Mrs. Holloway had many helpful suggestions for the women in her detailed report. A sick relief committee being formed Mrs. A. T. Blanford was appointed as chairman. The committee will take care of the sick and needy families and do general visiting. The next meeting to be held on April 2, will be at the home of Mrs. C. R. Cunningham of Altura avenue. Eight members were present.

Ruth Titus was voted May queen of the La Crescenta school. Her attendants will be Ruth Reynolds, Margaret Titus, Eileen Karr, and Fern Laguerre. Part of the program for May Day will be a jinx dress parade class competing with fancy costumes. There will be the usual May Day poles. Rehearsals for the various exercises will begin at the first of next week.

Members of the art department of the La Crescenta valley women's club met Friday afternoon at the home of the curator Mrs. C. V. Phillips. The article in Lit-tary Digest on the life of George Innes, wax landscape artist, whose centennial was celebrated some time ago was read by Mrs. Phillips. An illustration of color effects was given by Mrs. Phillips who painted a small picture of the hills as seen from her studio windows with the brilliant yellow of the wild wall flower and the blue and mauve tints of the mountain lilac in the foreground. Tea was served. Those attending were Mesdames N. B. George, Zelago, have returned to make their homes here permanently.

Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Hartranft have returned from their trip to Florida.

Mrs. J. Todd Murrie entertained a number of friends at her home on Walnut drive, last week. Those present were: Mesdames Wakefield, Newman, Mitchell, Killick, Bergess and Miss Dorothy Bergess.

CAR STRIKES POST KILLING 2 WOMEN

Three Men Of Party Injured In Crash Occurring On San Diego Road

LOS ANGELES, March 23.—Enveloped in flames when the automobile in which they were riding from San Diego struck a post and overturned early today near Norwalk on the State highway, two wealthy Los Angeles women, Mrs. O. H. Miller and Mrs. Marjorie Pike Chesman, were killed and O. H. Miller, husband of the dead woman; Dwight Miller, son of the Millers, and W. D. Chesman, husband of the other dead woman, were severely injured.

The accident, according to deputy sheriffs who investigated, occurred when Miller, who was driving, became confused as to the route of the highway where a branch road intersected and the machine struck a concrete post, throwing the machine back into the highway, where it overturned and burst into flames. The women are said to have been dead when extricated from the wreck. The three men were rushed to the Norwalk state hospital for treatment.

Big Laugh

SYD CHAPLIN, who scores a knockout in "CHARLIE'S AUNT" at the Glendale Theatre.

"Charlie's Aunt" scored a knockout last night at the Glendale theatre, with Syd Chaplin in the role of Sir Fancourt Babberly in this famous play by Thomas Brandon. Audiences have been known to laugh at comedy features before but the audience last night grew almost hysterical and the walls of the theatre fairly shook with laughter.

It is doubtful if any comedian even Syd's famous brother Charlie, has ever aroused such spasms of mirth, capturing the true comedy spirit and retaining it throughout the length of the film. "Charlie's Aunt" comes "from Brazil, where the nuts come from," and lives up to the reputation. The play was directed by Scott Sidney.

Kirby and DeGage, the well-known dancers, present their new Spanish number, "La Ferruca," hailed by Priscilla Dean as an outstanding triumph. Miss Dean dances her big scene with Kirby in "Viennese Madness," her new picture. Accompanying Kirby and DeGage are Lopez' "Castilian Serenaders." Elaborate costumes and scenery are provided. The number is an Orpheum act booked through the Western Vaudeville Managers' association.

BOOTLEGGING

LOS ANGELES, March 23.—Ranking the "profession" of bootlegging as lower than that of grave-robbing, Sturges Q. Adams, deputy city prosecutor, discussed the various angles of the operation and enforcement of the Wright act in an address before the police training school for officers at Exposition park.

FARMERS PROTEST

OROVILLE, March 23.—More than 500 farmers in session at Biggs passed a resolution declaring that the State Railroad commission is acting as a direct agent for the Sutter-Butte Canal Co. and demanded investigation by the State Legislature of the hydraulic department of the commission.

Play Pleases

MISS MARY I. ALPAUGH, who appears in "The Ruined Lady" which is being presented by the Dobinson Players at the Playhouse, Central and Lexington. The production is a big hit.

"I have been an actor and producer for thirty years and I have never had a play, nor seen one, which affects me as does 'Manna'." Fred J. Butler, director of the Dobinson Players, was speaking. He handled the productions for Oliver Morosco in San Francisco and also in Los Angeles for several years and more recently enhanced his reputation by putting on the one-act plays which have made the Writers' club of Hollywood famous.

"It is a play of the heart and the spirit," he went on. "It has unerring appeal for every one of us, whether we profess any creed or none at all. Those of us who do not attend church have that same hungering to believe and to hope. It is basic, going right down to the roots of human nature."

"This play tells us and shows us that belief is the best remedy for our ills, bodily and mental. The word which expresses that play is gripping. It holds you from the first curtain to the last. There are splendid characterizations and it is replete with tense situations."

It Has Everything
"The thing specially remarkable is that each person of the play is a distinct individuality. Each impresses himself or herself on you. There is considerable about God and religion and the Bible, but there is no mawkishness or false sentiment. The 'hard boiled' veteran talks in a rough and hard-boiled manner. And there are flashes of humor all through which lighten the pathos and the terrific power of some of the scenes."

"That play has everything!" "Manna" follows the present run of "The Ruined Lady," which closes on Saturday night, March 28, Manna opening Monday, March 30. Miss Doris Lloyd, who is playing the lead in "The Ruined Lady" and doing it so delightfully, has a big dramatic part in "Manna." So has Joseph McManus. And Miss Mary I. Alpaugh and other favorites of the Dobinson Players are in the cast.

THE GATEWAY

Robert Z. Leonard is famous for his lavish, luxurious settings, and the brilliant social whirl into which he places his pictures. With Mae Murray, whom he has directed in recent successes, the expected thing is that she will be gowned at the height of fashion. But Miss Murray was busy playing the "Merry Widow" for Erich von Stroheim when Mr. Leonard started to make "Cheaper to Marry," his latest production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

So Paulette Goddard, who won wide acclaim as Madame de Pompadour in Valentino's "Monsieur Beaucaire," was selected for the vamping role of this film version of Samuel Shipman's famous stage play.

And a new Paulette is shown to motion picture fans for the first time in "Cheaper to Marry." The former French dancing beauty of Ziegfeld's "Follies" demonstrates that she can do more than play a character lead.

In this picture Miss Duval is a recently lovely girl, made bitter because the man she loves is too cynical to marry her, preferring to defy conventions in his contempt for matrimony. In the orgy of extravagance started by Paulette, gowns and jewels costing tens of thousands of dollars are worn. Extreme fashions of the present day in street, boudoir and evening attire and furs were made expressly for the new star by the costume department of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. Miss Duval also wears some of her own Paris creations, which are certain to stamp her as one of the screen's best dressed women.

The Gasoline Tax

In response to a telegram from the Legislative Committee of the State Supervisors' Association, requesting, in the name of all boards of supervisors, that the Standard Oil Company withdraw its opposition to an increase in gasoline taxation, K. R. Kingsbury, President of the Standard Oil Company, sent the following telegram:

"There has been so much misrepresentation of the attitude of this Company toward proposals to increase gasoline taxation that we are very glad of this opportunity explicitly to state to you and your associates and the organization represented, our policy and our activity in this matter.

"This Company is and always has been a supporter of good roads and in the present situation is not in opposition to the expansion of California's highway system, but only to the proposed method of raising the additional funds said to be necessary.

"We are opposed to any increased taxation of gasoline as a matter of principle. The tax is virtually a sales tax on a product which we sell. The three-cent tax would be a tax of twenty per cent on the wholesale price of gasoline in San Francisco. There is no marketer of any commodity who would not object to a twenty per cent sales tax on his product.

"Believing the tax to be wrong in principle and unfair to our business, this Company some months ago announced its opposition and with all possible candor stated its position as clearly as it knew how—frankly, publicly and openly.

"In its examination of the situation the Company, from its long experience and study of probable future consumption of gasoline, estimated that revenues under present motor taxation laws would yield the sums said to be required for roads, and these facts were made public, not only as an argument against further taxation, but also because good citizenship demands that anyone in possession of important facts regarding a public question should set them forth.

"This Company's activity has not been confined to California. With equal frankness it announced its opposition in Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Arizona, where new gasoline taxation has been agitated, as did numerous other interests. The legislatures in these States have adjourned without action except in Nevada.

"Your telegram states that the Company's opposition is so resented that the result will react against it. It is impossible to believe that any company operating in the State of California will, because it ventures frankly to express its opinion of a public proposal which it believes inimical to its welfare, suffer in official or public esteem, which we are pleased to believe this Company enjoys to a marked degree. We believe our position to be so right and sound from an economic or any other point of view that we cannot renounce it, as you request."

DARKENED WINDOWS

By CORNELIA KANE RATHBONE
Copyright, D. Appleton & Co. Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

He had thought of her so constantly, he had wooed her in imagination so ardently, that when she came forward to meet him, quietly, unsmilingly courteous, gently aloof, his feeling was one of sick bewilderment. Surely, he thought, after last night they were no longer strangers! Yet there she stood thanking him very graciously for his kindness of the night before, and for his thought of her now.

She extended her cool, slim hand, the very hand which had clung to his arm only a few hours ago, and let it rest lightly in his grasp, the very instant. He had dreamed of clasping it closely in his own, even, in a wild moment, of touching it with his lips. He had seen himself in the role of protector and confidant. He had come, with perhaps an unacknowledged sense of magnanimity lurking in his mind, to lay his heart, wordlessly at her feet; to say with his eyes what was, as yet, forbidden to his tongue. And she greeted him as she might the veriest outsider. He stood before her chagrined, abashed, like a child whose advances had been rebuffed. In her extremity, he told himself, she had clung to the only prop at hand—that was all. Everything else had existed only in his imagination. The woman of his dreams belonged to the night and was gone; the woman of the day, remote, withdrawn, stood behind a barrier intangible but real, beyond which he could not pass. She spoke to him of intimate things, but with no tone of intimacy; she confided in him, but as a lawyer, not as a friend. His uncle's absence she deplored, expressing kindly solicitude for his accident. She had met him, she said, on various occasions, and had liked him.

Relegated to the low estate of his uncle's representative, Graham accepted the role meekly, and bided his time. Not by assault, but by slow siege, was the victory to be won. The joyous intoxication of the night was gone, leaving him sober and chastened, but the will to victory was his, and he was so strong that in the end, he told himself, she could not but yield. An intense desire awoke in him to hear her laugh. Could she laugh? he wondered. Had she ever laughed? Had her shadowy eyes ever sparkled with merriment? She was more a thing of shadows today in her black gown than ever. It was a soft, graceful gown, but very simple, even shabby. She saw his eyes upon it and seemed to read his thoughts.

"This is the only black thing I have," she explained quite simply. "I shall get something more suitable as soon as I can. I wore this when my father died. He died two years ago," she said in answer to Graham's sympathetic question. "It was shortly after I was married. He had been ill a long time; he suffered greatly. I hoped to make things easier for him by my marriage—but it was too late."

She spoke of her useless sacrifice without emotion, without bitterness. All that was over. She had covered up her tragedy so long that she had no wish now to strip it bare. It was laid away forever, wrapped in the winding sheet of her pride.

"Does your husband's death leave you quite alone?" Graham asked.

"Quite alone," she answered steadily. "Father counted on finding some kinsfolk—here—distant cousins, but still of our blood. But America is so vast, so overwhelming! He could never hear of them."

After a moment, with a little gesture which seemed to waive aside her personal concerns, she began to speak of the funeral arrangements. She could not, however, disregard her husband's written wish. Mr. Hurst, it seemed, had left instructions as to what he wished done in case of his death: they had been found that morning in a drawer of his writing table. He was to be buried in state from the church where he had been married to his first wife. Evadne did not think there was any sentiment connected with this choice—it was an important church which would lend itself fittingly to an important funeral, that was all. She herself, she added, was Catholic; she had been married in a little, unimportant church on the west side.

Money matters were then touched on, and the will mentioned. Evadne, Graham discovered, knew nothing about its terms. Mr. Hurst had told her that she would be well provided for; she knew no more. She had never spoken to her husband about such things. Graham gathered that money had always been doled out to her, and that, at the moment, she was quite without funds. Here, at least, he could help her.

"You can do something else for me, if you will," she said. "You can post this note for me as you pass the corner box."

"I only wish it were a greater thing," he ventured, as he slipped the note into his pocket, and rose. "There is one thing more," she said, checking him. "I want to speak to you about last night. I was quite unstrung and I am afraid I said and did foolish things. As a result Inspector Breitman suspects me, I think, of—of having done what Denis accused me of." She held up her hand to silence Graham's hot protest. "Mr. Flint is very courteous, and very considerate of me, but I feel that he suspects me too. There are detectives in the house. When I try to telephone I think somebody listens. When I went out to early Mass this morning I am sure that I was followed. I couldn't swear to it, but I felt it. I seem to feel eyes every-where."

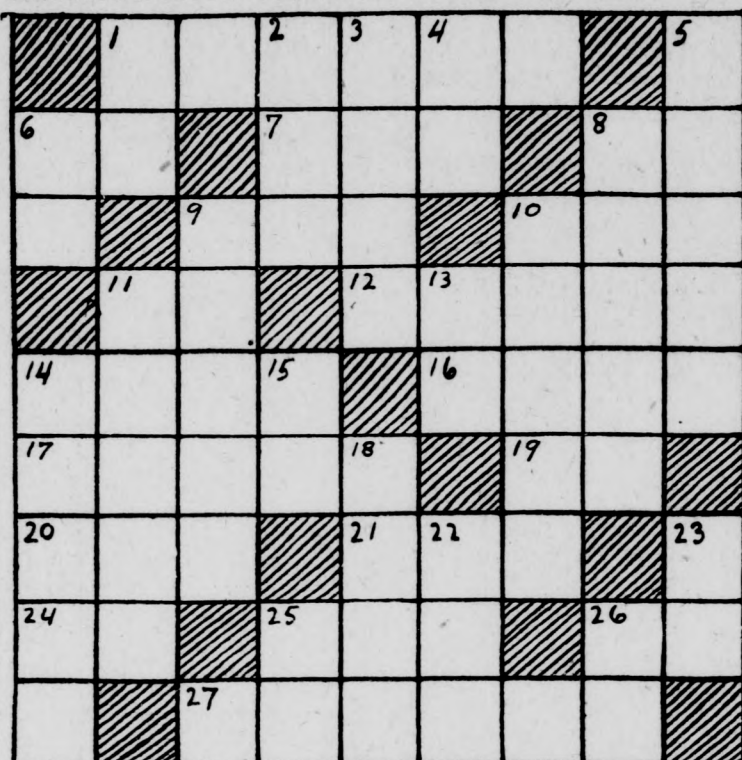

"It's damnable!" fumed Graham. "I'll speak to Flint about it, but I'm afraid I can't do anything."

"I know you can't. I only wanted to tell you that I knew what they have thought, and that I didn't want them to make you, who have been so kind to me, suspect me, too. I have troubles of my own, things I can't explain, but they have no connection in the world with the murder of Mr. Hurst. Won't you believe me?"

It was not to the lawyer she was speaking now—it was woman to man. For a moment the barrier she had raised was thrown down. Her eyes met his and held them. They seemed to bid him look through them into her soul. As he gazed, hardly breathing, his doubts and fears fled. He could not understand—but he believed. He made his own the words of the Hebrew father: "Lord, I believe. Help Thou mine unbelief." He took the hands she had stretched out to him in a passion of appeal, and reverently kissed them. It was an act of contrition, of faith, of worship. As he lifted his eyes and met Evadne's once more, he caught a new look in them—a soft, tremulous, awakening look, like the first dream of dawn in the east. It was gone in an instant, and her hands were withdrawn; she was again behind her barrier; but Graham thrilled

UNCLE WIGGILY

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BARK BOAT

"Have you very much to do today, Nurse Jane?" asked Uncle Wiggily of his muskrat lady housekeeper one morning.

"Oh, just the usual Monday washing of the clothes," answered Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy. "Mrs. Twisty-tail, the lady pig, was coming over to help me, but she isn't here yet, so I shall do it alone."

"No! I'll help you!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily with a brave and fearless twinkle of his pink nose. "You may wash the clothes and I will dry them and put them away in the closet."

"Ho! Ho! Ha! Ha!" laughed Nurse Jane. "I guess you must be thinking of the dishes, Uncle Wiggily. 'You often dry them for me, but you can't dry clothes. Only the sun and wind can do that, after they are hung out on the line. But you can, if you wish, wring the water out of the clothes for me, and they will then dry more quickly.'"

The rabbit gentleman said he would do that, and while Nurse Jane was rub-rub-rubbing away at the tub, the bunny uncle twisted the clothes through the wringing machine, and when they were hanging on the line to dry Nurse Jane asked:

"Why is the water so high?" asked Nurse Jane.

"Because of the melting snow," answered the rabbit. "It is now spring, you see, and the warm sun is thawing the snow, which runs in water down the big and little hills, swelling the brooks. And we must cross this stream, Nurse Jane."

"Why?" she asked.

"Because there are no adventures on this side," answered the bunny. "We must cross over to the other side. There we shall find an adventure, I'm quite certain."

"But how can we cross the big brook when there is no bridge?" asked Nurse Jane. "I can swim, being a muskrat, used to living in the water. But you are not a good swimmer, Uncle Wiggily. No rabbit is."

"I shall make us a boat of bark and in that we can paddle across the little brook, which has become big because of water from the melting snow," said the bunny.

With his sharp, gnawing teeth Mr. Longears cut some bark from the birch tree. With Nurse Jane's help he bent the bark into the ends together with sharp thorns from a bush. With two sticks for paddles, he and Nurse Jane got in the bark boat and started to cross the stream.

But they had not gone far before Nurse Jane cried:

"Oh, the boat is leaking! The water is coming in and we shall sink! I don't care for myself; but what about you, you can't swim!"

"Yes, the boat is leaking. We must put bark to shore," said the bunny. "I forgot about putting on the seams of my boat some sticky gum from that pine tree. That's what the Indians used to do. They plastered the holes in their bark canoes over with sticky gum. We'll soon be all right."

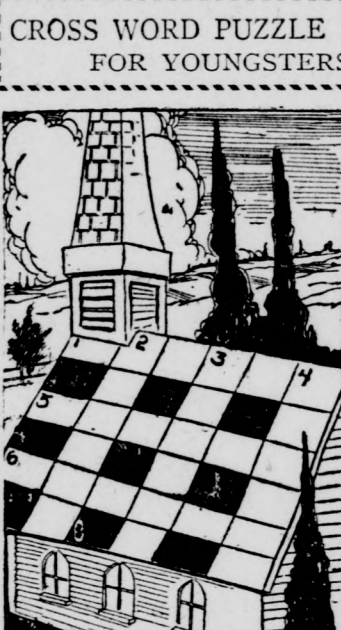

Back on shore the bunny found a pine tree with sticky gum oozing from a crack in the bark. Using a stick, he covered all the holes in his boat. Then he and Nurse Jane got in again and just as they were paddling across the stream to seek an adventure, along came running the Bob Cat.

"Hi! Come back! I want to nibble your ears!" howled the Bob Cat, who, like all cats, was afraid of water.

"You sit down on the shore there and wait for me!" called Uncle Wiggily. "So the Bob Cat sat down. And, as it happened, the bunny had let on shore a lot of the sticky pine tree gum he hadn't used on his boat. And the Bob Cat, with his silly little tail, sat right down in this gum."

"Oh, I'm stuck! I can't get up! I'm caught!" he howled.

"It serves you right," said Nurse Jane. Then she and Uncle Wiggily paddled to the other shore. They didn't find any adventure, but they were saved from the Bob Cat, who was held fast in the sticky pine gum until his wife came, later, with a kettle of warm water and thawed him loose. And if the postman will leave a bottle of milk for the gold fish to go swimming in, the next story will be about Uncle Wiggily's squishy teeter.

TROUBLESOME EARS

Are you troubled with itchy ears? Many are.

Itching in the ear canal may seem to be intolerable, at times. When there apparently is no discharge and still ears chronically itch, there is probably a low grade of infection there.

The universal mode of relief seems to be to insert the tip of the little finger and then do a rapid dance with the hand. If it does not allay the itching, a vigorous scratching with a match or wire hair pin or other handy instrument, is indulged in. However, these procedures usually irritate the ear canal the more and may infect it. (See below).

Until you can have an examination, you can do this to relieve the itching: Take a match and twist a piece of absorbent cotton around the unbusiness end; when it is wrapped, have it so that the cotton is about the size of a pea at the tip. Have it extend down over the sides sufficiently so it won't pull off the match and get stuck in the ear. Pour a few drops of toilet water or a solution made of half water and half alcohol (not wood alcohol) on the cotton and swap out the ear. These solutions are antiseptic and will kill off the unfriendly germs if there is not too vigorous a crop of them. (Your ear may smart and perhaps ache a second).

BOILS IN THE EAR CANAL

Those who have had boils in the ear canal say there is nothing so agonizing. One of the reasons for this is that the skin over the lining of the canal is very tightly drawn and the swelling from the boil causes a great pressure on the nerve endings.

At first, there is an itching in the canal, then later pain and tenderness. The pain may extend to the whole side of the head, become throbbing in character and every movement of the jaw will make it worse. When the swelling becomes marked enough to close the canal, deafness will be produced.

When you scratch your ear with your finger nail, hair pin, match, etc., you may carry in the germs that will cause a boil. The ear textbooks say that recurrent attacks of boils in the ear canal in many instances may be the result of irritation from decayed teeth or from diseases of the interior of the nose and throat, and that they are commonest in gouty or debilitated individuals. They are also due to the fact that some of the germs from the last boil continue to hang around and sooner or later they multiply sufficiently to produce another boil.

For a boil in the ear, as for any trouble with the ears, you really should see an ear specialist or your family physician, but if you cannot do that, take a piece of absorbent cotton about two inches long and three-quarters of an inch wide, fray out the ends, then fold through its thick central portion so that the thin ends are together. Wrap the thick part around the end of a matchstick and make a cone of it. It should be firmly enough wrapped to be smooth and taper evenly.

Cover this liberally with some 1 per cent yellow oxide of mercury ointment (which you can get in tubes, at any drug store); then insert it gently into the ear canal. Remove the match by turning it in the opposite direction to that which the cotton was wrapped, and steady the cone with the finger so that it is not withdrawn as the match is withdrawn. If the pressure of the cone causes increased pain, you can withdraw it a little. (These directions I have adapted from Gleason's textbook on the Ear).

This treatment may abort a boil. If it doesn't, the boil will rupture in from two to eight days, according to whether it is superficial or deep seated. After the boil ruptures (the pain ceases then) syringe the ear with a warm boric acid solution, two or three times a day, until the discharge ceases. After this, it is well to swab the ear canal the same as I told you to do for itchy ears, for several days, so as to kill off the stray germs that might cause a new boil to form.

COLD CREAM

Sometimes when I come home very tired and very dirty from a long day out of doors, I think cold cream is a woman's best friend. No matter how dry the skin is from extreme heat or cold, or how grimed from the soot and dirt of the streets, or how chapped from wind and dust when driving, a generous amount of cleansing cream rubbed over the face and neck and then washed off with hot water and soap, will make one feel like a new person. The tired lines go, the blood eyes brighten, the skin blooms again and is soft to touch and smooth and fresh in appearance. Years and weariness depart.

All because cream is so thoroughly cleansing, and because it supplies oils that have either been dried out by bad climate, or absorbed by dirt. Can you imagine your face if you washed it with ice cold water, after a long dirty train journey?

Here's a good cleansing cold cream formula:

White wax 1 ounce
Spermaceti 1 ounce
White mineral oil 5 ounces
Rose water 1 1/2 ounces
Borax 30 grains
Oil of bitter almonds 15 drops
This is for cleansing cream. If you want something a little nourishing, substitute either olive oil or almond oil for half the mineral oil—2 1/2 ounces of each, that is, if you want something very nourishing for wrinkles or bad chapping, use olive or almond oil instead of the mineral. This is really two formulas in one, you have a cleanser or a flesh building cream, just as you please. You make them the same way, melting the waxes in the oils until just blended, then adding the warmed rose water and heating until ready to cool off. Then pour quickly into jars to harden. Cold cream is quite easy to make.

Sandra—For a bad case of blackheads it is best to get some help through professional treatments. Another method is to apply hot, wet cloths to the skin to soften the impacts and open the pores, followed up by massage with oil or a cleansing cream. Remove surplus cream and scrub with soap and warm water. If the skin is not sensitive, use tincture of green soap. Rinse several times and then soothe the skin by massaging into it a little bit of any good cream, after which close the pores and tone the skin by dashing very cold water over it, or by an ice rub.

Tomorrow—Answered Letters

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quick reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

Miss Anna Nelson, 324 1/2 North Howard street, one of the operators at the Glendale exchange, Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., was accosted last night on the way home by a man she described to the police as short and wearing a blue sweater. The attempted attack occurred at 9 o'clock. Sergeant C. P. Blake investigated. The man jumped out and grabbed her as she was nearing the corner of California avenue and Howard street, Miss Nelson said. Clifford Hepburn, 635 North Howard street, who heard her screams, gave chase to the man, but lost trace of him in an alley off California avenue.

GLENDALE TRIMS BUICK AUTOS, 13-8

Local Players Show Smooth Working Team On First Appearance Sunday

The Glendale Merchants accomplished three things on their first appearance at the ball park on San Fernando road yesterday afternoon. They defeated the Buick Autos, one of the strongest semi-pro teams in Southern California, 13 to 8; they demonstrated they would be in the baseball race this season and they showed the fans who attended the game a smooth-working team.

Taking the field as strong favorites by reason of a long string of victories, the Buick Autos suffered their worst upset this season. Walter Hydlar, doing mound duty for the local team, turned in eleven strikeouts and held the slugging visitors to ten hits, all of which were scattered. Nobles worked behind the bat for Glendale.

Acosta, Harding and Crowley gathered three base hits; Parsons, Harding, Blinkin, Garcia and Acosta rapped out doubles and Manager M. R. Bacon pounded out two sacrifice hits. The box score:

Roper And Herman In Portland Bout Tonight

PORTLAND, Ore., March 23.—Bob Roper will bet Tiny Herman in a ten-round bout at the Armory here tonight, with the winner likely to get the first fight with Jack Dempsey in the heavyweight champion's return to active ring duty.

"Standing room" only signs are already out, the best seats being sold. The biggest crowd ever to attend an indoor bout here is expected. Roper will weigh in at about 195 and he has announced he expects to put away the 217-pound Herman within seven rounds. Either Bartley Madden of New York or Charley Weinert of New Jersey will probably meet the winner.

Dempsey To Be Placed On Ineligible List

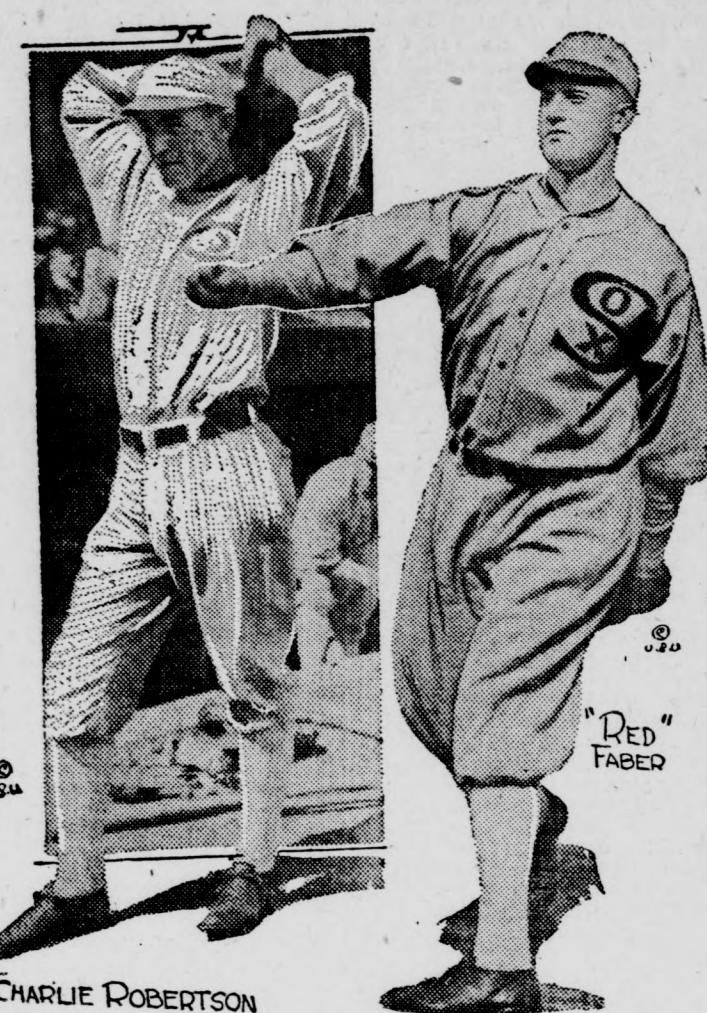

NEW YORK, March 23.—Jack Dempsey probably will be placed on the New York state athletic commission's ineligible list tomorrow because of his failure to accept the challenge of Harry Wills. It was indicated today. The commission's action will be taken after waiting fifteen days for the heavyweight champion to answer the deft of the colored challenger. If Dempsey is placed under the ban, he will have company in Mickey Walker and Mike McTigue, respectively welter and light heavyweight champions, who likewise have been barred here.

TAKES WORKOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—Young Stribling, Georgia school-boy heavyweight sensation, worked out here today for his bout in Recreation ball park Saturday afternoon against Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia.

Collins Counts on Pair

FABER and ROBERTSON are expected to bear most of the pitching work for the White Sox during the coming season. Eddie has other pitchers but he is not counting on them to do as much for the team as this pair of hurlers.

CHARLIE ROBERTSON

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Written for The Evening News
Eddie Collins, preparing for his premier as big league manager and pilot of the White Sox, is counting on Urban Faber and Charlie Robertson in his scheme of things the coming season.

Collins is satisfied with his outfield with Hooper, Falk, Mostil, Elish and Archdeacon, all rarin' to go. His infield lacks a star shortstop, but Harvey McClellan can fill the bill again if "Pie" Davis, Wojack, Cartozzo and Bill Barrett all fail to impress the Sox pilot.

Ray Shaik is counted on to catch at least half the games and Clyde Crouse seems ready to relieve him capably. And if the veteran red headed Faber will do a comeback and young Charlie Robertson finds himself after his off year Deacon Eddie will be sitting pretty, he feels sure.

Last year Hollister Thurston, castoff, was Johnny Evers' best pitcher. Turned in twenty victories and lost but fourteen games for the fourth placers. Ted Lyons was the only other pitcher to work in more than ten full games. He won twelve games and lost one less.

Faber Wins But Nine

The veteran Faber turned in nine victories, but was nipped eleven times. Robertson won but four and lost ten.

Connolly worked in forty-four games, but won only seven and lost thirteen. Blankenship won seven and lost six. Levertette and Cvenrogas each contributed two or three victories and Mangum but one. Faber suffered from a splintered elbow bone. Robertson failed to hit his old time form.

In 1923 Faber won fourteen and lost eleven games for the disgraced Sox. Robertson won thirteen and lost ten.

Robertson's work last season was especially disappointing.

His no-hit game, pitched against the Tigers at Detroit, April 20, 1922, had drawn the attention of the baseball world to him. Just twenty-seven man-eating Tigers had faced him—only to find themselves eating in harmless kitty fashion from his hand.

Just Starting In

Of course, starting realized that the game would not make him that he was a youngster and had much to learn. But the stuff he displayed that day raised the hopes of the Sox routers to a high pitch. He won fourteen games for the Sox that season and lost fifteen. The Sox finished fifth with exactly a .500 average.

Robertson got away to a bad start the following season. This too was not taken seriously. Scores of young pitchers have taken a year or two to find themselves after showing flashes of brilliancy at the start. Last year, however, much was expected of Robertson.

Faber has already reported that his arm is o. k., apparently, thanks to the removal of the bone splinter. Robertson has said that he intends to knuckle down and deliver this season.

If these two come through and Collins gets fair results from the others and a repetition of his good work from Thurston the Sox will have a neat pitching staff. That's what Collins needs most.

BASEBALL

Burbank won a slugfest from Santa Rita yesterday at Burbank, 10 to 8. Peltus, centerfield for the Burbanks proved the big man with the stick when he gathered a homer, triple, double and single in four trips to the plate. Ken Parker turned in eight strikeouts, while Sigler of the visiting team had nine.

Monrovia had an easy time against the Manchester Merchants yesterday, winning 10 to 1. Gould pitched good ball for the winners.

The Pacific Electric crew nosed out the Midway Oilers, 6 to 5, yesterday, each team collecting three runs in the final frame. Duffy started the game for the Oilers, but was knocked out of the box in the seventh inning and Huffacker finished the game. Dill was on the mound for the winners.

Cecil Cruz pitched good ball for San Fernando yesterday against Zelzah, but Brown was too strong and Zelzah won, 7 to 5. Brown turned in eleven strikeouts, and held San Fernando to six hits.

TENNIS POPULAR

LONDON, March 23.—Tennis has far outstripped cricket in popularity in the British Islands. One hundred and ninety-one officially sanctioned tennis tournaments have been scheduled throughout the United Kingdom for the coming season.

JIMMY M'LARNIN TO FIGHT SILVA

Hard-Hitting Scrapper Will Step In Main Event At Vernon Tomorrow

Fight fans who attend Jack Doyle's Vernon arena tomorrow night are going to see a lot of mits flying through the air in the main event, and the majority of flying fins will land, for Teddy Silva and Jimmy McLarnin are down for ten rounds of milling. Both are flashy fighters, ready and willing to stand up and take 'em, just as much as they believe in putting out a fact.

For the semi-windup, Joe Ryder and Young Nationalists are booked for six rounds. The bout has all the earmarks of an old-time slugfest, and it is expected someone will hit the canvas before the time limit expires. Tracey Ferguson and Roy Moore will step six rounds or less in the special preliminary.

Kid Cervaco and Billy Howard are carded for four rounds, and Jack Comby and Johnny Fiske will open the show with four rounds. The entire card is made up of good bouts and a sell-out is predicted.

By FRED C. LANE

For International News Service.
NEW ORLEANS, March 23.—Sixteen new cards have been inserted into the deck which Lee Fohl, Red Sox manager will shuffle so thoroughly for the next few weeks that the identity of the players who will stick, are fixed in his mind. One of them undoubtedly is Ernest Vache, with Dallas last season. He is a good hitter and it is nobody's secret that the Sox lacked hitting last year.

Vache hit for an average of .354 in the Texas league, where the fences are not short. This has caused the general belief that Vache will occupy an outfield berth when the Sox open in Philadelphia. He is the possible ace referred to.

The king is Rudy Kallio from the coast. His record makes him stand head and shoulders above the other pitching recruits in camp, and although Rudy is by no means a youth, he seems ready for the big time. Both Kallio and Vache appear sure of their places. The same thing applies to Dudley Lee, who played fine ball at shortstop last year, until he injured a finger.

Another certainty, of course, is Howard Ehmke, the club's leading pitcher. He has been a hold-out which may delay his early season development. Ira Flagstead, outfielder, also expressed dissatisfaction with his contract and failed to show on time. He will play the outfield regularly.

Prothero, obtained from Washington, is expected to prove a better third baseman than Danny Clark who has been sent away to the tall timbers. Once in a hitting slump, Danny was terrible to gaze upon. Prothero, in fact, is regarded as Clark's superior in every department. He made a distinct impression upon the Boston officials in 1924, where he clipped the offerings of the Sox's best pitchers and showed a rare turn of speed, something of which the 1924 Sox knew nothing.

"You had to hit the flagpole in center field to score a run from second base," is President Quinn's way of expressing the 1924 situation.

Bill Wambegans' job at second base is an open proposition, with former Exzell, former St. Louis Browns; Bill Regell from Salina; Conolly from Bay City; Ewell Gross from San Antonio, and Phil Todd, with the Sox last year, in the field, and hustling Joe Harris is an almost certain starter at first base, and Val Pichnich is likely to catch well over a hundred games, barring injury.

HULI TRUCKS AND RADIOS TONIGHT

Snappy Battle Expected As Two Teams Take Floor At Harvard High

By A. S. HALL
Of The Evening News Staff.
When the smoke of battle has cleared away tonight, basketball fans of Glendale will have a comprehensive idea of the outcome of the Merchants' league race. Tonight's card is the Huli Trucks and Radios. The truckmen are in first place, with the Radios in second.

A victory for the Radios tonight will mean the truckmen and Radios will finish the season tied for first place, barring accidents and upsets. A victory for the truckmen will give them clear sailing for the rest of the season, as it is not predicted the only other team to meet the truckmen—M. E. church—will administer another defeat to the Huli crowd.

The Radios have been going strong the last few weeks. They were set back slightly week before last when the Cala Lily team beat them 27 to 16, although the Radios beat the milkmen 29 to 27 in an extra period game during the first round. The Huli Trucks beat the Radios 22 to 23 in the first round, and these are the only two defeats the Radios have encountered to date. The game is scheduled to start at 7:30 o'clock and the admission is free.

ROUND-UP OF TAX DODGERS HINTED

Drive Said To Be Launched Directly At Prominent Leaders In Filmland

LOS ANGELES, March 23.—One of the greatest round-ups of income tax dodgers ever conducted in California, is about to be launched here and throughout Southern California by federal officers, it was learned today. The drive, it was said, will be directed against several prominent film people, big business men and others who are alleged to have evaded paying income tax which in some cases dates back as far as 1919. Who are the film folk or others who are being investigated was not revealed.

The recent indictment here of A. G. Barnes, internationally known circus man, is said to be the first of a number of similar cases that are being investigated. Federal officials in this district refuse to comment on the reported round-up.

RAIL MORTGAGES DOUBTED BY U. S.

Northern Pacific Land Grant Case Points Decision Against Firm

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Doubt was cast today on the validity of early mortgages of the Northern Pacific railroad before the Congressional committee investigating land grants and other affairs of the railroad.

Representative Williams, Republican, Michigan, suggested that in the railroad foreclosure proceedings of 1875, the federal incorporation may have been extinguished and later mortgages based on the federal incorporation might not have had a sound basis.

Charles W. Dunn, vice-president and counsel of the railroad, contended that the validity of these mortgages has been sustained by the federal courts in 1896 foreclosures and re-organization.

"We find the system of pew rents is dying," says a church assembly committee's report, which adds that of nearly 6,000,000 sittings in Great Britain only 262,632, which is about 4 per cent, have been rented.

Santa Barbara Bouts Stopped By Ministers

SANTA BARBARA, March 23.—Legalized boxing received a knockout here when the Ministerial union caused the permits of the local American Legion post to be suspended.

The pastors invoked the aid of Governor Richardson in having the permit suspended. The action of the ministers has caused the Legionnaires to drop all plans for conducting their shows until a rehearing is had before the State Boxing commission.

The Legion had obtained a building, announced its first card and signed contract for extensive alterations on the stadium property when the ministers, led by Rev. Samuel Hughes, president of the union, succeeded in stopping, for the time being, at least, of boxing bouts in this city.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRL SHOOT BOY PUPIL

Probe Started After Charge That Half Of Students Carry Revolvers

TANGIER, Ind., March 23.—A special grand jury has been called here to investigate the shooting of Roscoe Goodwin, Silverwood high school boy, by Katie Clements, senior at the high school, during a recess in the rehearsal of the senior class play. Miss Clements claims she secured the gun from the overcoat pocket of Grover Small, another senior, and that she pointed it at Goodwin, her former sweetheart, as a joke. She did not know it was loaded, she declares.

Goodwin was wounded in the neck and it was first believed he would die, although at the Danville, Ill., hospital to which he was rushed, it was today said he would recover. The state's attorney's office says the grand jury probe will be directed toward the charge that more than half the high school boys are carrying guns.

WOMAN FOUND TO BE MAN IN DEATH

Masquerader Lived In One Community For Years Under Disguise

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., March 23.—Sarah McPherson, who had lived here for fifty-one years, is dead, and with her death today was revealed the great secret of her life—she was a man. For fifty-one years Sarah McPherson wore dresses with becoming modesty, followed the usual avocations of women and in employment worked at women's tasks.

Only one person knew the secret—a man friend. Insistence of his mother that he wear dresses, even when he was old enough for long trousers, started him in the feminine rut, McPherson told his only confidant.

Use of a razor kept his beard from his face. A perfect wig aided the transformation. His feet, squeezed tight and small into women's shoes and affectation of feminine mannerisms never betrayed him.

The masquerader will be buried at his old home in Pug Wash, N. H., beside the body of the mother who wanted her boy a girl.

Styles, who is an engineer and a holder of common stock in the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad, assailed the proposed merger plan, claiming that the promoters had grossly misrepresented the value of stock of the dissatisfied shareholders.

War In Religious Cult Seen In Man's Death

OROVILLE, Cal., March 23.—Authorities here today were preparing to investigate reports that Henry H. Schalow, who died in an Oroville hospital yesterday, had been mutilated with a branding iron by members of an alleged religious cult which has been active in this vicinity for some time. District Attorney William Rothe was in charge of the investigation.

Schalow was admitted to the hospital several days ago apparently ill from other causes. However, examination of the dead man's body by Dr. C. M. Whiting, county physician, disclosed deep burns which, the doctor declared, could not have been self-inflicted.

Shortly before his death Schalow is said to have mentioned to an attendant that he had been in a "mixup" but refused to explain further.

According to data at the hospital Schalow died of an alleged blood poisoning disease. Examination of the body showed six or seven deep scratches which Dr. Whiting said had apparently been seared into the flesh by a red hot branding iron.

NEW YORK CLOSING

By W. S. COUSINS
For International News Service

NEW YORK, March 23.—Heavy selling of industrial stocks today resulted in a severe price decline in most of the active stocks, the establishment of a new low average price level for the year to date, and the most serious shrinkage of prices of outstanding market leaders of any session since February 16.

In many respects today's decline was more drastic than any similar movement this year in its treatment of the market leaders. Baldwin was pushed down nearly 5 points below the previous low of the year, and United States Steel, which today reported net earnings of $11.77 a share last year, dipped to 118, for a loss of nearly 3 points from Saturday's close and about 12 points from the high of the year. General Electric earned $5.56 last year, all things considered, but the price of the stock declined to a new low for the movement completing a decline of about 10 points since announcement of the increase in the dividend from 5 to 6 per cent. The bears persisted in their efforts to depress prices, encouraged by the success of their operations in recent sessions.

Since March 2 all of the 1925 advance in average prices has been wiped out, and today a good bit was taken out of December's rise.

By declining to around 14, Interborough Rapid Transit completed a drop of about 12 points since the opening on Saturday.

Industrial stocks broke to lower price levels in the last hour as liquidation in large volume continued.

Large blocks of industrial and leading railroad stocks were thrown on the market in the final dealings and prices broke sharply in numerous issues. Baldwin at 118 represented a loss of 6 points for the day; American Can lost 6, at 168; Cast Iron Pipe, 11; United States Steel, at 117½, showed a loss of 3 points; Gulf States Steel was down 4; Savage Arms, 4; American Sugar, 3.

Selling extended to the railroad shares in the final period. New York Central broke 2½ points, to a new low for 1925, at 113½; Union Pacific, at 140, was 2 points lower than its previous low; Atchafalpa was offered freely and declined to 118, down 2 points for the day. Baltimore & Ohio, Lehigh Valley and numerous medium-priced rails lost a point or more.

Motor stocks also held their ground. Local traction stocks made a slight recovery near the close. Call money was advanced to 4 per cent.

Sales today, 1,763,600 shares; bonds, $12,129,000.

Hearts and Dollars

Two Statements—one of which has to do with Health and Welfare, the other with Financial Strength

AN OPEN LETTER

(Name on Request)

MR. HALEY FISKE, President
METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE CO.
NEW YORK CITY

My Dear Mr. Fiske:

Why don't you publish a Heart Statement along with the regular Financial Statement you put out each year?

Any company can publish impressive figures of financial strength, financial growth, etc. But figures don't stick. All I remember from your last year's Statement is that the Metropolitan has several million policyholders and is the biggest life insurance company in the world.

I've been following some of your magazine advertisements lately that tell of work you're doing to help people live longer. It isn't entirely clear in my mind just how you're doing it or why you do it, but since you are doing it, give us the facts and figures on that. Call it a Heart Statement or a Welfare Statement, or anything you like, but—give us the facts.

Perhaps other Metropolitan policyholders like myself would be interested in a Statement of that kind.

Very truly yours,

C. N. S.

WE are indebted to Mr. S. for his suggestion. It is an excellent one. We publish an annual Business Statement of the Metropolitan, not because we think that the figures will be remembered, but because they offer conclusive evidence of unusual growth and strength to its 22,000,000 policyholders.

And it is this extraordinary financial strength that makes it possible for the Metropolitan to carry on a nation-wide campaign for better health and longer life.

People now live longer

Records kept by the Metropolitan show an extraordinary decrease in the death rate among its policyholders. Compared with 1911, for example, there were nearly 62,000 fewer deaths in 1924 among its Industrial Policyholders than there would have been if the 1911 death rate had prevailed.

While the average life span in the United States is 51½ years greater than it was 12 years ago, the life span of the Industrial Policyholders of the Metropolitan increased nearly 8½ years—a betterment of three years over the general average—in the same interval.

These increases in longer life are due in large part to the Metropolitan's Health and Welfare Work among its policyholders.

You are the gainer

You and all the other 22,000,000 policyholders—one out of every six people in the United States and Canada—reap the benefit through better health and decreased cost of insurance.

The wealth of the Metropolitan belongs to you and to no one else. The Metropolitan has no stock and no stockholders. It is owned solely by its policyholders.

You, as one of the policyholders, share in the ownership of all its investments; in its railroad bonds, its real-estate mortgages, its loans to farmers, loans to states, cities and towns for public improvements and similar enterprises.

You, as a part-owner of over $1,600,000,000, should read the two statements on the left with a feeling of pride in what your company has achieved.

The efforts as well as the assets of the Metropolitan are dedicated to protection against future want—to greater happiness, better health and longer life.

Haley Fiske.

"HARD HIT"

The ones most hardest hit by increased taxation are the poor old couples who have scrimped, scraped and saved, just sufficient for a competency. Every loaf of bread and pound of butter has been figured out for each day's needs, taxes, doctor bills and other necessities of life—each and every penny is accounted for. Then here comes along an increased tax bill on their little home. I tell you folks, it's pretty hard sledding. It's the same home to them, but the powers that be have appraised and increased its valuation, although it's worth no more to the old couple who just wish to remain and pass the rest of their declining years.

It's becoming a common remark that poor people will soon have to sell their property to pay their taxes.

REBUILDING IN STORM AREA STARTED

Additional Doctors, Nurses
Rushed Into Territory
To Fight Disease

CHICAGO, March 23.—Storm-torn Illinois and Indiana girded themselves for their struggle to rehabilitation. While additional doctors and nurses, rushed into the devastated area in the last forty-eight hours, fought to stay the threatened epidemics of gangrene, pneumonia and typhoid following in the wake of the tornado, disaster committees, working with various relief organizations, turned their attention to the rebuilding of the torn areas, replanting of the torn acreages of farm land and re-capitalization of losses.

The total dead in the five states which felt the tornado's breath today was placed at 694 after careful checking and re-checking by Red Cross officials. Of these, 552 were in Illinois; eighty-seven in Indiana; twenty-three in Tennessee; seventeen in Missouri, and fifteen in Kentucky. And, unless the scourge of pestilence stalks through the ruined areas, it is believed these figures will remain constant.

This, physicians in the district today did not consider likely, although they admitted that the danger was still too decidedly acute to permit any great amount of optimism. They pointed out that the ruining of all water and sanitation plants in the storm district, coupled with the living conditions which the tornado has forced, makes the devastated area ripe for various plagues, and has, in fact, already brought out cases of violently communicable disease; but, for the most part, they believe the victims have been helped.

Emergency water sterilization plants were in operation today and doctors believe that another twenty-four hours will see much of the danger of pestilence lifted.

Murphysboro Pauses

To Buy Storm Dead

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., March 23.—With more than 175 of her 208 dead laid to rest in the St. Andrews and Lower Grove cemeteries, Murphysboro turned toward its relief work and rehabilitation today.

The majority of the 700 injured are well on the road to recovery. Funeral services were held from dawn to dusk Sunday, with short religious services over each body. Relief work continues unabated, perfectly organized. Tents have been received for all the homeless and those who have been forced to sleep in store rooms, railroad stations and public buildings and fully equipped with living quarters, food and clothing.

Health conditions are absolutely clear of any indications of pestilence, twenty-four hours of vaccinations and the most severe sanitary restrictions, Dr. Carl A. Carr, medical director, said.

Plan Meetings on Eisteddfod Contest

Meetings in the different communities of the valley between officials and committee chairman of the Glendale district Eisteddfod and representatives of the communities will be held during the next week in order to stimulate interest in the forthcoming Eisteddfod contests. Chairman A. L. Baird will head a large committee to call upon leaders in art, music and drama in the different cities and explain the Eisteddfod movement and solicit participation in the contests to take place in Glendale. Concentrated effort to secure a large entry list will be made under the direction of H. M. Butts and members of his committee.

The Eisteddfod committee met at the Harriett Mae Tea room today at noon with Chairman Baird presiding. Reports were given at the meeting by Mrs. Roy Ballagh, Mrs. Homer Jones, Mrs. Alex. Mitchell and Ralph W. Brown.

Stewart then turned to the questioning of Faiman by Judge Olson, which preceded Faiman's confession to the state's attorney.

REVIVAL MEETINGS START AT ATWATER

Rev. C. R. Hudson Opens Services Sunday
At Neighborhood Christian Church;
Campaign to Last One Week

Rev. C. R. Hudson, Los Angeles evangelist, opened his week of preaching at the Neighborhood Christian church, Atwater Park, yesterday. Both morning and night large audiences heard Rev. Hudson.

Professor C. C. Purvis, soloist and chorus leader who arrived at the Neighborhood church the middle of last week, will remain and take charge of the musical features during the stay of Rev. Hudson. The evangelist meetings are of a pre-Easter nature and the public is invited to attend, according to Rev. J. W. Utter, pastor of the church.

Bledsoe On April 13

The appearance of Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe, candidate for mayor of Los Angeles, before the Atwater Community Improvement association has been postponed until Monday night, April 13. Judge Bledsoe was scheduled to address residents of Atwater Park a week from tonight at the meeting of the improvement body. A change of date was necessary because of conflicting plans of the speaker, however.

E. E. Lampton, Atwater Park candidate for council from the first ward, will be the main speaker at the next meeting of the association. Mr. Lampton is back in Atwater Park after a brief stay in the northern part of the state and is again actively in the race for the councilmanic position.

Open New Subdivision

A new subdivision on the new concrete paved highway, two miles from San Bernardino, has been opened by J. L. Tugman and C. E. Michaels, Atwater Park realty men. Mr. Tugman is also a partner in the realty firm of Tugman & Wilson, Glendale boulevard. Exceptional real estate values in lots and the lure of oil are offered in the new subdivision, Mr. Tugman said. Large lots are being sold at rock-bottom prices. Seven wells are being drilled by various oil companies, near the subdivision at the present time.

Sunday Morning Service

"The Upward Look" was the morning theme of Rev. M. Grant Nelson at the Atwater Park Baptist church yesterday. A large attendance featured the morning service. At night Rev. Nelson gave the fourth of his series of sermons on "The Miracle of Christianity," carrying the historical thread of the Christian church from the time of Constantine the Great to the period of Luther. At the night service, Victor Johnson from Pasadena, gave an impressive reading, "Pieces of Silver," a ten-minute poem depicting the betrayal of Christ by Judas.

Glendalians At Meeting

Rev. Clifford A. Cole, pastor, and a delegation from Central Christian church of Glendale, will attend the evangelistic service to-night at Neighborhood Christian church, Atwater Park. Their attendance is of special significance as Rev. J. W. Utter, pastor of the Atwater church, was formerly pastor of the Glendale church. The service tonight will launch a week's revival in charge of Rev. C. R. Hudson, state superintendent.

Children Run Away To Save Family Expense

PORTSMOUTH, England, March 23.—"As you are so poor, we have gone to save you expense." Theresa and Richard Varney, aged 12 and 11, respectively, wrote this note to their parents, packed clothes and food in a small grip, and set out to make their way in the world. They were found two days later shivering under a hedge twenty miles from their home. Their parents attributed their escapade as due to a love of sensationalism rather than thought of saving them money.

He will make the visit in connection with the forthcoming bi-centenary of the Irish Free Masons, and it is expected that he will be installed as Grand Warden of the order in Ireland. Bloodgood, national chairman on state licenses; Glenn D. Willaman, secretary of the California Real Estate association, and C. A. Culberson, of Los Angeles.

Approximately 100 delegates were present for the conference, Mr. Hanson said. Following the banquet the delegates attended the Mission Play at San Gabriel.

The Glendale Realty board led all other boards of Southern California once more when the largest delegation to the conference came from Glendale. Thirteen members of the local board were present when plans for an all-year Own Your Home campaign were completed. State President D. Richard Ainsley and Clifton J. Platt, chairman of the Pasadena conference, congratulated President William L. Twining and members of the Glendale delegation on their splendid support.

As a result of the conference, an Own Your Home campaign, to last throughout the remainder of 1925, with special drives during April and October, will be staged throughout California under the direction of the State Real Estate association. Plans for carrying out this campaign locally will be made in the near future by the Glendale Realty board.
